TURKS READY TO BACK ALLIES; BRITISH SCOFF AT NAZI RAIDS

Hit By Nazi Planes

H. M. S. Iron Duke

Raiding German bombing planes attacking over Scapa Flow, Orkney islands, yesterday damaged H. M. S. Iron Duke, veteran British battleship used as a training vessel. The Iron Duke, which participated in the Battle of Jutland during the World war, is pictured above. Map shows Scapa Flow where the Germans, previous to the attack on the Iron Duke, sank the battleship H. M. S. Royal Oak as she rode at anchor.

CHAMBERLAIN SAYS GERMANS LOSING IN AIR

Claims Foes Lost Fourth of Planes Used in Attacks on British Isles.

ADMITS NAVY LOSSES

But Calls Berlin's Reports on Results of Warfare at Sea 'Fantastic.'

(By Associated Press)

LONDON—Britain has "made a good beginning" in the war against Germany, Prime Minister Chamberlain declared in the house of commons today in a speech minimizing British losses and saying Germany had lost more than a fourth of the planes which have raided the British Isles

He paid tribute in his brief weekly war report to the work of defense forces in fighting off the first German air attacks on the country

In these first air battles "fought over our own coasts, we have destroyed eight enemy aircraft without losing a single machine of our own," Chamberlain said.

He added that several more German bombers might have failed to reach home and said the casualties "thus certainly exceeded 25 per cent of the attacking force and may have been higher."

The British navy "has sustained severe losses, both in officers and men," Chamberlain said referring to the sinking of the battleship Royal Oak Saturday and casualties inflicted by German air raiders on the Firth of Forth Monday.

Sixteen men were killed in the Monday raid and 810 went down with the Royal Oak when a submarine torpedoed her in Scapa Flow, British naval base in the Orkney Islands off the north Scottish coast.

Attacks on British fleet bases were "fully expected," the prime minister said.

"The extent of the enemy's disappointment at the failure of these attacks to inflict serious injury on our ships may be measured by the fantastic nature of the claims which they have felt obliged to invent."

Turkey Prepares to O. K. Aid Treaties With London, Paris After Revealing Break With Soviet; Dardanelles to Remain In Turkish Control.

(By United Press)

ANKARA, Turkey—Turkey, announcing the rupture of negotiations for a friendship treaty with Communist Russia, prepared today to sign formal mutual assistance treaties with Great Britain and France.

It was expected that the treaties would be signed during the week-end immediately upon the return of Foreign Minister Sukro Saracoglu, who left Moscow at midnight after three weeks of fruitless negotiations there.

Saracoglu was expected to halt briefly at Constantza, Rumania and at the Bulgarian port of Varna or Burgas to consult with Grigore Gafencu, the Rumanian foreign minister. and George Kiosseivanoff. Bulgarian premier-foreign minister.

Newspapers, commenting on the Russo-Turkish break, said today that Turkey would remain adamant regarding its control of the Dardanelles strait and would be faithful to its engagements to Great Britain and France.

The break did not, they said, mean a break in Turkish-Russian friendship. That, they asserted, would remain cordial.

Favors Britain, France.

The entire situation in the Black sea-Balkan-eastern Mediterranean area had been changed suddenly and radically by the refusal of Turkey to accede to Russian demands.

The change was in favor of Great Britain, France and Rumania and against Germany.

It was calculated to cause anxiety to Italy, with its Dodecanese islands dominated by Turkish coastal forts unless it pursued a policy of strict neutrality.

Just what Russia had demanded of Turkey remained uncertain. But it was certain at least that Turkey had refused to accept demands which conflicted with its engagements to Britain and France.

Premier Refik Saydam announced the failure of the negotiations with Russia.

He said Russia had presented Turkey with proposals absolutely different from those originally scheduled for discussion.

Russia's new demands, he said, were incompatible with Turkey's pledges to Britain and France, which Russia had appoved in advance.

Further, he said, the Russian proposals might prove detrimental to Turkey's own security.

Guarantees offered by Russia, he said, would not compensate Turkey for obligations it would have been expected to assume under a new treaty.

Report 4 Reasons For Turkey's Break.

LONDON—(U.P.)—Four sensational last minute Russian demands caused the breakdown of Turkish-Russian diplomatic negotiations at Moscow, it was reported today, and opened a new phase in European diplomatic activities.

Bigelow Opposition Gaining Momentum

Ohio G. O. P. Joins Campaign Against Pension Plan, Dems Due to Follow Today; County Drive Under Way.

Opposition to the proposed Bigelow amendments to the state constitution which come before the voters on Nov. 7 gathered momentum today with the Ohio Republican organization lined up against it, and the Democratic state central committee expected to take the same stand today at its meeting in Columbus.

The campaign against the Bigelow amendments—the old age pension plan and the proposal to lower the number of names required to place any issue on the ballot—was under way in Richland county with the Richland County Emergency committee, set up to help defeat the proposals at the November election, planning a county-wide mass meeting.

The executive committee at a session last night completed arrangements for a mass meeting at 7:30 p. m. Friday in the American Legion auditorium. The chief speaker will be a representative from the Ohio Emergency committee who will point out that the Bigelow plan is the most serious threat ever made against the state's financial structure and constitution itself.

Emerson S. Weller was selected Monday to head the Richland committee and the organization was completed last night when Mrs. H. L. Ackerman was named vice president and J. H. Mayberry, secretary-treasurer.

A number of local groups, including the American Legion, have taken a stand against the Bigelow plan. One group however, Labor's Non-Partisan league, went on record last night in favor of the amendments.

Bigelow Plan---What It Would Cost

There are two separate amendments to the state constitution proposed in the Bigelow plan. They are:

1—To place all persons, regardless of needs and with certain classes excepted, on pension after they reach 60 years, and have retired from "gainful occupations as wage earners"; to pay single persons $50 per month and married couples $80 ($40 apiece).

2—To amend the constitution so that a referendum on an amendment to the constitution can be secured with 100,000 names of voters secured at random; or to place a proposed law on the ballot with only 50,000 signatures.

The pension, under the Bigelow set-up would be paid to approximately 700,000 persons in the state, at a yearly cost of $310,000,000, without counting an administration to handle it.

The entire cost of operating the state now, counting the present old age pension, is about $159,000,000, so that the additional burden of the Bigelow pension would bring the total expense to approximately a half billion dollars a year.

The Bigelow plan includes two proposals for raising this fund—by a two percent tax increase on all real estate (an increase of $20 on every $1,000 valuation), and a state income tax, which would be one fourth of what an individual now pays in federal income taxes.

These two proposals, however, would only bring in an estimated $140,000,000 at the most, opponents claim, and possibly much less, for income taxes vary with economic conditions.

This would leave a shortage of between 170 and 260 millions a year to be raised in some other manner.

Opposition to Plan Widespread

The Republican central committee, which met yesterday in the state capital, voted unanimous opposition to the Bigelow old age pension and the initiative amendments. Earl A. McFarland, Mansfield member of the central committee, attended the Columbus meeting.

The Republicans contend that the Bigelow pension plan of $50-$80 a month for certain persons over 60 years of age would cripple all state welfare institutions, would double all real estate tax-

The American freighter Independence Hall advised that she had picked up survivors, the U. S. maritime commission in Washington announced.

The freighter picked up 300 survivors, it was said.

The Independence Hall sailed Sunday from Bordeaux, France.

British 'Iron Cavalry' Tanks Will Lead Drive Against Nazis

By DREW MIDDLETON

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE—(AP)—When Britain bids for a "break through" on the western front, the vast number of tanks that have clattered and banged their way to the lines will lead the attack. They are the iron cavalry of the modern army.

Built by Britain's best engineers and manned by soldiers of a famous cavalry regiment, the blunt-nosed machines of the squadron I visited were pointed toward the front, ready to lead the infantry waves into battle when ordered.

The squadron was on the alert, forbidden to go more than a half-mile from its billets.

I rode in a tank along the frontier, a tank vastly different from the lumbering beasts of a quarter-century ago.

Alongside the heavy machines that the British launched against the Germans at Cambrai in 1916, these tanks are tiny, but their speed and effectiveness has been doubled or tripled.

Hammering over the ground still pocked by the shells of the World war, I saw how effective the new tanks were.

Each tank mounts machine-guns and rifle and is equipped to throw smoke bombs out of trigger mortars to screen an advance.

The turret swivels so that the gunner can spray his bullets in a deadly rain over enemy positions.

Speed of 50 miles an hour can be made on open roads, and 35 miles an hour across a plowed field. The powerful engine does three miles on a gallon of gasoline.

From his turret, the pilot commands the tank, talking to the rest of the crew by telephone—because the clamor is like a thousand boiler factories all going full blast. He can communicate with other tanks by two-way radio.

It is a terrifying experience to

HONOR: Hitler Dines Crew of Sub Which Sank Royal Oak

(By Associated Press)

BERLIN—Adolf Hitler today received Commander Prien and his submarine crew, credited with sinking the British battleship Royal Oak in Scapa Flow, naval base north of Scotland. He awarded Prien Germany's highest war decoration, the Grand Cross of the Iron Cross.

The reception was the high point in a gala day in Berlin for the submarine men.

Meeting the men in his private study, Hitler heartily shook hands with each man and thanked them in the name of the German nation.

Present at the meeting was Grand Admiral Erich Raeder, who yesterday presented the men with Iron Crosses for their successful raid on Saturday.

Before the reception by Hitler the men were cheered by an enthusiastic rain-drenched crowd as they paraded in open cars from Templehof airdrome to the chancellery.

Hitler said the crew's achievement "strengthened the entire German nation in the imperturbable thrust in victory." He described their deed as "the "proud-

PEACE: Kings Draft Plans to Keep Minor Powers Out of War

BULLETIN

BERLIN—(INS)—Nazi Germany abandoned the Scandinavian states to Russian domination today, rejecting all suggestions that the reich should block further Soviet expansion in the north.

(By United Press)

STOCKHOLM, Sweden—The kings of Sweden, Norway and Denmark, the president of Finland and their foreign ministers met today to work out a common program for keeping their 16,000,000 people out of another European war.

Already their waterways had become a battleground for British, French and German naval and air forces; their shipping had been harassed, and one of them, Finland, believed herself imperiled by Russia's western movements.

Reported Russian demands against Finland for strategic Baltic islands were expected to be the main subjects of the conversations. Another will be the economic consequences of the war, since they bear vitally on Scandinavian neutrality.

The visiting delegations were guests at the castle of Sweden's 81-year-old king, Gustav, during their two-day stay.

The foreign ministers were meeting this morning at the Swedish foreign office for preliminary conversations, and were joining the kings and president at luncheon.

The eight men at the conference were:

King Gustav and Foreign Minister R. J. Sandler of Sweden; King Christian X and Foreign Minister P. Munch of Denmark; King Haakon VII and Foreign Minister Halvadan Koht of Norway; President Kallio and Foreign Minister Erkko of Finland.

Skeezix Heads for Mansfield, Too

MEET SKEEZIX, leading character of "Gasoline Alley."

"Gasoline Alley" will be one of the comics in the eight-page section that will be a part of the new Sunday News-Journal, which will appear for the first time Oct. 29.

Skeezix and Uncle Walt, his foster father, and all the rest of the characters in "Gasoline Alley" are wholesome, pleasant people. As a matter of fact, they're patterned after friends and relatives of Frank King, the artist who draws "Gasoline Alley."

Here's an unusual thing about Skeezix—he grows up as time goes on, something that few other comic characters do. Back in 1921, he was a baby left on Bachelor Walt's doorstep. Now he's a young man of 18 and has a girl friend. That's the girl friend with him, in the accompanying sketch.

Watch for Skeezix, Walt, Auntie Blossom and all the other Gasoline Alley characters in the Sunday News-Journal on and after Oct. 29.

20 Hurt as Liner President Harding Battles Storm

VESSEL SENDS OUT CALL FOR MEDICAL AID

Many Seriously Injured, Wire From Vessel Bucking Strong Gale Declares.

BULLETIN

NEW YORK — (U.P.) — The United States liner President Harding, battered by a north Atlantic gale which injured at least 20 of her passengers, wirelessed today that she might have to make for Halifax.

(By United Press)

NEW YORK—At least 20 persons aboard the United States liner President Harding have been seriously injured in a gale off the New England coast, she wirelessed today.

She and other ships were fighting a terrific storm which had been racing northward off the coast for several days.

The coast guard cutter Hamilton, responding to her request for medical assistance, was rushing to her side with a doctor and medical supplies.

A few hours after the President Harding appeal, the British freighter Blairbeg wirelessed that she was in need of "immediate assistance."

The President Harding's message indicated that the ship itself was in no danger, but the Blairbeg's message indicated that it was the ship's condition and not that of her crew and passengers which invoked her distress call.

Freighter Loses Rudder.

Mackay Radio reported at 7:56 a. m. that the Blairbeg had lost her rudder. She gave her position at 45.33 north, 53 24 west, approximately 400 miles due east of Cape Race, Newfoundland.

Two coast guard cutters were battling the seas, trying to get to both vessels.

The President Harding's appeal for medical aid was received by the coast guard station here and in Boston at 12:45 a. m. today. The cutter Hamilton was 150 miles off the coast and turned at once toward the Harding's position which was then 300 miles south of St. Johns, Newfoundland, about 1,000 miles from New York. She may reach the liner tonight.

The President Harding was carrying more than her normal complement of passengers—mostly Americans fleeing war-torn Europe. No accurate estimate of the number of passengers was available immediately.

Her appeal for medical assistance was so worded as to indicate a serious condition aboard. She asked for materials with which to treat fractures—and for morphine. She also asked the coast guard to be prepared to take off injured.

Her message said:

"Many seriously injured in heavy weather. Send morphine, iodine, splints, fracture supplies, remove injured. One seriously burned."

Shows 'Cascading Rhythm Lights' at 2 P.T.A. Benefits

The first public presentation in Mansfield of William Grassick's "Cascading Rhythm Lights," a new system of transmitting color by musical notes, will be given Friday night at Senior high school auditorium when the Bushnell P. T. A. sponsors two benefit shows.

Grassick and his brother, R. M. Grassick, recently took their Cascading Rhythm Lights to Cleveland for an audition before a number of theater men and winter bookings are being arranged for them.

The lights in vivid colors are controlled by the moods and tones of music and are transmitted to a jeweled screen on the stage or back of the orchestra.

In addition to the Grassick display there will be a new motion picture which will not be released to theaters until Oct. 23. It is Edwin Carewe's "Are We Civilized?" It is a cavalcade of civilization based on a theme similar to the Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse." It depicts the march of civilization, its forward and backward steps. In the cast are William Farnum, Frank McGlynn, Anita Louise, Stuart Holmes and LeRoy Mason.

The Bushnell P. T. A. is sponsoring the shows at 7 and 9 p. m. as a benefit for the sound system for the Bushnell building.

There is a Santa Claus . . . in fact a couple of them. A few weeks ago girls at Senior high school bemoaned the lack of a good piano for their gymnasium classes. TIGHTENS STAND ON JUVENILES

Probate Judge Sends 2 Boys to O. S. R. and Lancaster for Junk Yard Theft.

Adopting a sterner attitude toward juvenile offenders, Probate Judge C. J. Anderson today had sentenced a 17-year-old Mansfield youth to the Mansfield reformatory and his companion, 16, to the Boys Industrial school at Lancaster.

Both youths, who confessed the theft of scrap brass from the Malo junk yard on Bowman street, had been in juvenile court five or six times and were on probation.

The youths were arrested Monday by police after employes of the junk yard had caught the pair removing the old metal.

Judge Anderson indicated he will be more severe with juvenile offenders who come before him a second time.

In cases where the youth shows no inclination to go straight when given an opportunity, they will be sent to institutions as a protection for others, he asserted.

Judge Anderson said the older boy will go to the reformatory under an intermediate sentence and may be eligible for parole at the end of a year if the court advocates it.

The other youth will serve an indeterminate sentence at Lancaster, the length of the term depending upon his behavior at the institution. Neither of the boys had been in an institution before, although they had been repeatedly warned in juvenile court after being cited for petty thefts or truancy.

Parents of the older boy requested that he be sent to the reformatory to keep him away from the other youth, Judge Anderson explained.

FLOWERS ESTATE CASE BACK IN COUNTY COURT FOR NEW HEARING

A dispute over the 21-year-old estate of the late Jacob Flowers, which was believed settled last year, was back in the county probate court again today.

Hearing the case on a special assignment from the Ohio supreme court, Common Pleas Judge C. H. Huston was asked to determine whether the will of the late Mr. Flowers or that of his widow who died in 1933 will be followed in distributing the property, valued at more than $25,000.

Probate Judge C. J. Anderson previously had ordered distribution of the estate to 118 heirs of Mr. Flowers, but counsel for several religious and charitable institutions named in the Flowers will contested the ruling. Judge Anderson agreed to step aside in favor of another judge at the request of attorneys.

Judge Anderson carried out the supreme court ruling last year in ordering distribution to the Flowers heirs, but the case came back for rehearing when counsel for religious and charitable institutions named in the will contested the decision, and the approval of a bill for $5,000 sumitted by counsel for the heirs as attorney fees.

The case has gone through two county courts, the appeals court and the supreme court over a period of about five years.

Arguing the case today were Attys. C. H. Workman and James W. Galbraith, representing the Flowers heirs, Attys. H. M. Rust, Mansfield, and O. W. Kennedy, Bucyrus, for the religious organizations, and Atty. Dean Talbot of Galion, counsel for Edward Metcalf, former executor of the estate.

Mr. Flowers, a Sandusky township farmer who died in 1918, left his widow a life estate in his property. After her death it was to go to the Salvation Army in Mansfield, the First Methodist church at Galion, and the Methodist Board of Foreign and Home Missions.

Mrs. Flowers later left a will making the Methodist Childrens Home at Worthington and the Good Samaritan hospital in Galion beneficiaries.

The estate includes a 125-acre farm in Sandusky township and three properties in Galion.

RECORDS FROM 1926 TO 1931 TO BE REVIEWED

Inquiry Ordered by Appeals Court to Take 2 Weeks; Heirs Aid in Probe.

County Auditor Norman L. Wolfe started an investigation today of personal taxes paid on the property of the late Frank B. Black, founder of the Ohio Brass company, from 1926 to 1931.

The tax probe, ordered a week ago by the Fifth district appeals court, is expected to include Mansfield and Richland county properties and may produce several thousand dollars for the county, the auditor said.

Wolfe said Black's sons, as executors of his estate, are cooperating in checking records.

A preliminary audit, made by attorneys for Michael Hallabrin, who filed the suit as a taxpayer which began the action, is said to have shown a "large amount" due. Wolfe said a report of the findings would not be available until the investigation is completed, probably in two weeks.

Assessment Required.

Under the court order, obtained by Hallabrin, the auditor is required to assess the taxes against the estate if the investigation reveals that the full amount was not paid during the six-year period.

The appeals court order opens the way for a check of other properties and the auditor said he would turn to them after the Black estate records have been investigated.

Owners of properties allegedly avoided payment of personal taxes from 1926 to 1931 under a state exemption which later was declared unconstitutional.

Hallabrin contended certain stocks and securities and other personal belongings were not listed for taxation.

When the case was dismissed in common pleas court, Hallabrin brought a new mandamus action against the county auditor and treasurer. The treasurer later was dropped as a defendant when the court granted the mandamus.

FAIR ENOUGH!

Pegler Takes Up Subject of Expense Accounts and Recalls a Few Incidents

—By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK—Your correspondent is about to take himself on tour for a spell, and the subject of expense accounts naturally presents itself. The subject warms up old memories of Floyd Gibbons, who always gave an impression that, so far as the auditor was concerned, he knew where the body was buried. Actually he didn't go around giving public readings of his expense accounts as inspiration for his colleagues, but from the time that he replaced his wardrobe and baggage which had been lost in the Laconia by shopping exclusively in Bond street, London he was held in awe by his fellow journalists.

There are some individuals—or there were some, anyway, until a few years ago — who always seemed to have permission to spend at their own discretion, and when Mr. Gibbons that time paid $150 just for a suitcase alone to replace the one which had gone down off the coast of Ireland the rest of the little community of ink-stained wretches in London sort of roped him off in a class by himself.

Very likely he would prove to have been the all-time champion of the world if his old statements could be dusted off, for he once crossed the Sahara at the head of his own caravan with only his conscience for his guide. That was an opportunity the like of which befell no other man. Some of his contemporaries while on the march with cavalry columns in the minor league wars had had very valuable thoroughbred horses shot out from under them in poker games, but Floyd's caravan was motorized.

Some auditors are very broad-midded, and some are indecently curious for details and like to collect little souvenirs of a correspondent's travels which are called receipts and vouchers. One of the large metropolitan papers often sends representatives off to the North Pole or to social events calling for finery not included in the standard, everyday kit of a journalist, and is very liberal in the matter of equipment but requires that these garments be turned in at the property office, with the expense accounts, at the end of the duty. They say the boss wears these Eskimo costumes, plug hats and all, to masquerades.

There was one individual with the A. E. F. who was humiliated deeply by the disallowance of an item of $10 for a pair of binoculars. The auditor did not blink at $25 as this correspondent's share of a banquet for General Bullard or $50 as his share of a banquet for General Pershing, who, naturally, required more elegant fare. But he had been passing on expense accounts of correspondents around the world for years, and he insisted that binoculars could not be had for less than $40.

Your correspondent once was placed in a trying situation when he was handed $500 and assigned to go out skylarking in Miami Beach and describe the scenes in the gambling houses. Wine was on sale in these premises at $25 a quart, and the standard price of chips was 50 cents.

It was a pleasant assignment for almost a week, except that as fast as your correspondent would spend money, being a bon vivant, he would win it back playing roulette. It looked as though he might be compelled to resort to stealing in order to avoid the necessity of turning back the $500 intact, which would have made him an outcast from journalism, when his luck changed.

But nowadays they don't care $500 worth, or even $5 worth, how much people gamble and drink anywhere.

There was a journalist on assignment in Moscow once who had a serious disagreement over an expense account of $2,000 a month for living expenses. He said he was buying his rubles at the legal rate when everybody else was buying them on the black bourse for about a dime a dozen, and when they asked him why he didn't buy his on the black bourse he said he was too honest to violate the laws of the country. They didn't want a man that honest in Russia, so they called him home, and he quit.

Some ball clubs used to give their players $5 a day on the road for eating money, but they would eat at the Greasy Spoon to knock down money, and when the allowance was reduced to the Greasy Spoon scale they nearly starved. So the club cut out the allowance and gave them permission to sign tabs in the hotel up to $3.50 a day, but without any kick-back for economy.

A long time ago an eminent American statesman got his start in political life by disallowing an item of 50 cents for a baked potato.

This was Senator Donahey of Ohio, then state auditor and widely unknown. A judge said he had been charged 50 cents for a baked potato in a hotel where he was stopping on official business, and Mr. Donahey appealed to the farmers on the hot potato issue, promising to abolish such wicked extravagance if he were elected governor.

The farmers believed him, but by one of those strange contradictions of American government the cost of running the state and the career of Mr. Donahey, nevertheless, rose steadily together, both being now near the limit of their possibilities.

Hollywood Speaks---

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—An independent company is making a movie called "Hitler, the Beast of Berlin." Its trade-paper ad screams: "No war, no hate, no propaganda—but what a story!"

My eyebrows are pushing back my toupee!

Also brow-lifting, as 20th Century-Fox launches its "Grapes of Wrath," is a Warner ad on "Dust Be My Destiny," referring to the latter as the "first blazing story of America's migratory workers . . . from the flaming pages of the novel that shocked the world . . . (story) of a boy and girl searching for the GRAPES of happiness, battling alone against the WRATH of a violent destiny. . . ." The captials are mine, but wow!

Passing from the ridiculous to the sublime, it's a pleasure to report that 73-year-old August Tollaire, after four years away from the screen, is back in action with his double-pointed white beard—the only thing in Hollywood that is actually bathed in milk. . . . Director Irving Cummings put him into "Everything Happens at Night," the Sonja Henie picture.

Pat O'Brien slipped into pictures through a mistake by the Howard Hughes organization making "The Front Page"—when Pat, who had played the managing editor in a road company, was signed for the starring role because of his performance. . . . Now it comes out that another Hughes mistake is responsible for Randolph Scott's flicker career: Scott is playing his 53rd movie role in "20,000 Men a Year," and it all began when he was a guest at the Hughes home, planning to head back for Virginia. Before departure, he told Howard he'd like to see the inside of a movie studio. Hughes misunderstood — thought Randy had said he would like to "work in one." Hughes wasn't in production at the time but he fixed it for the Fox studio, and when Scott arrived to "visit" he went to work instead —as an extra in a George O'Brien-Lois Moran movie called "Sharpshooters." He liked it, and he stayed . . .

If you doubt that Lana Turner has arrived, take a squint (but through sun-glasses) at Lana's new car: it's a red model brighter than Baby Sandy's smile: But the girl can live up to it—after "Dancing Coed."

Paul Widlicska, who sometimes lives in a fog of his own making, was ready to give of his mists to the new "Raffles" but was thwarted. Sam Wood, the director, decided to be different: he would make "Raffles" without fog. And this was tough on Paul, for whom fog is but one branch of movie magic.

Widlicska is the man who once "medicated" a movie fog so that Clara Bow, suffering a cold, could work in the mist and take her medicine simultaneously. He's the man, too, who introduced a hint of perfume in the fog, much to the pleasure of the performers.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

Aside from keeping their voices lower, they were taking another precaution also, which Harry Underwood frowningly repeated to us.

"Here, Lady Fair," he said even while his hawk-like eyes missed no movement of the woman and her companion, "is where you pin back your ears and trot out that photographic memory of yours. We don't dare to use a pencil or make a suspicious move. But they're talking partly in code, a lot of gibberish, apparently, but it's a cinch that it means plenty. I'm going to retail it to you a sentence at a time. Can you park it in those marvelous memory cells of yours, so you can bring it out later tonight and write it down?"

"Yes, I can," I told him unhesitatingly, for I knew from experience just what I could do in the way of memorizing. "But I can't do anything else. You might as well countermand my dinner order. I'm not a bit hungry anyway, so it doesn't matter."

"We won't countermand the order," Lillian told me hurriedly. "We have plenty of time. Let me attend to that while you do your stunt with Harry. I'll manage, you'll see. Just pretend to play with your hors' d'ouvres. Harry can eat while he's doing his stunt, but he doesn't need all the courses now."

I heard her with only one part of my brain, for the most of my mental powers were concentrated upon my memory. Harry Underwood was beginning his sentence-by-sentence repetition of the conversation he was gleaning from the lips of the conspirators, and I was concentrating every bit of mental power I had on memorizing the words he was giving me.

I had no knowledge of how long Harry's dictation had gone on until he stopped abruptly, and then, after an instant, explained.

"They're stopping to eat now," he said, "but I don't think they're going to stay for a full dinner, so we'll have time to eat after they're gone."

"I'll spell you when they begin again," Lillian said. "Now, let's eat our first course. While you were talking I arranged with the waiter to hold our courses back until I gave him the signal. But I think we can get through the potage before they begin again."

Her prophecy almost succeeded but not quite. We had but a spoonful or two left in our soup bowls before Harry said: "Get busy, Lil! they're broadcasting again."

We went through the same routine as before, except that this time it was a much shorter period before the conspirators attacked their dessert—they were having but a two-course meal. And when they had finished, they left the restaurant hastily as if they had urgent business.

"How about it, Madge," Harry said when they had gone, "do you want to write the stuff down now?"

"It won't be necessary," Lillian said. "It's perfectly safe in her memory. But while I don't want to hurry you, I think it would be just as well if we didn't dawdle any more than is necessary over this meal. I'd like to see if we can decode that mess."

"Can't we go now?" I pleaded.

"Have a heart!" Harry Underwood said. "But—just as you say, Lil."

"Finish your dinner," she said comfortably, "but don't pay any attention to the waiter who believes a dinner like this should be eaten as if you were saying a prayer. I'll galvanize him into getting the courses on the table, and we'll do a bit of gobbling for once, with a prayer to all the French culinary gods that we'll be forgiven."

"I won't forgive you," her husband promised darkly, but he hurried as much as we did, and it was not very long before we were in the limousine again, traveling back to my father's Greenwich Village apartment hideaway.

HOROSCOPE

For Thursday, Oct. 19.

SWIFT and surprising developments mark this day, judging by the lunar aspect of unpredictable Uranus. It is a favorable configuration, indicating sudden change and upheaval, with travel, new associations and interests seeming to arise from nowhere. New matters rather than old are stimulated, with radical, novel and even spectacular occurrences.

Those whose birthday it is need not be surprised at the advent of sudden, surprising or dramatic situations. Removals, new environs and interests, as well as associations with strange persons, perhaps affecting the life with unforeseen and far-reaching influence, are forecast.

A child born on this day may have some rather unique or spectacular talent, a creative or inspirational ability or scientific genius. This may take it to conspicuous place in the public eye.

Answers To Female Homebreaker

Two or three weeks ago this column printed a letter which has brought in a tremendous response, especially from the aggrieved class—wives whose homes have been wrecked by homebreakers.

The Homebreaker who wrote to me, boldly stated her point of view. Said she had been engaged in a prolonged love affair with a married man, for which she expressed no remorse or repentance. Her argument was that a man who found love outside of marriage wishes to insure himself against losing this love. To which end he tries to keep his wife contented, free of jealousy or suspicion. He gives "more time, consideration and inward thought to her well-being than she would other wise enjoy."

Naturally, the wives differ from the point of view of the Homebreaker and the following are some of their letters.

"DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

"A woman who suggests that a man gives his wife more attention to keep her contented and free from jealousy is a snake in the grass. A man does these things to keep his wife from knowing that another woman is in the picture. He may go out of his way to be nice to his wife, to lull her suspicions.

"I speak with authority. A friend of mine, who came to our home presumably to see me, was carrying on an affair with my husband. And only through a misdirected telephone call did I uncover the truth. It caused our separation and broke up my little children's home.

NO APOLOGIST FOR SNAKES"

"DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

"A woman who tries to excuse her conduct for stealing another woman's husband and arguing that such clandestine affairs make husbands kinder to their wives is experiencing a case of 'wish-fulfillment.' Her phoney position spurs her into making specious arguments.

"DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

"Doesn't the woman who wrote you, that a hole-in-the-corner affair makes husbands kinder to wives, know what men, deep down in their hearts, think of a 'kept' woman? And has she forgotten that some day she will have to answer to God for breaking his commandments?

RELIGIOUS WIFE."

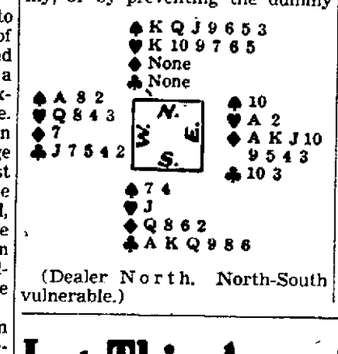
"The Authority on Authorities"

PICK THE RIGHT SPOT

Knowing when to lead trumps is one of the salient characteristics of good defensive play. Many a hand can be beaten by thus destroying communication between the declarer's hand and the dummy, or by preventing the dummy from ruffing a loser.



(Dealer North. North-South vulnerable.)

The same sharp spectacular bidding occurred on this deal at two tables of a duplicate game, with North calling 1-Spade, East the queer bid of 5-Diamonds, South doubling, North taking out to 5-Hearts, South 5-Spades and West doubling. In each case East led the diamond K, which North ruffed, and the latter then led the spade K to the A. Then came the variations.

One West returned the spade 8 to the Q declarer took the spade J, led the heart 5 to the J and Q and then lost to the heart A, being down one.

At the other table, when West took the second trick with his spade A, he decided to try for a club ruff by his partner. The declarer won this in the dummy and led a second club, discarding a heart. He then brought through the heart J to the A. East could return only a diamond, which was ruffed. A heart ruff enabled North to reach dummy and lead a third club for another heart discard. As a consequence the defenders could get no more tricks and the contract was made.

Let This Amazing "Vendol" Relieve Your Suffering Too

Read what a Mansfield lady Says it did for her in bad case of stomach upset, dizzy feelings, headaches, pains in back and limbs which were due to constipation and need of a diuretic to kidneys.

MRS. IDA MYERS

Vendol, the amazing medicine made of extracts of roots and herbs with mild alkalines added for double benefits, grows in favor with Mansfield people daily because of the proven relief it gives from many troubles due to constipation; need of a diuretic to the kidneys, a carminative, and a laxative. Its powers to relieve these troubles are proven by what well known men and women living right here in this city say it has already done for them. A recent example of this is Mrs. Ida Myers, of 136 West First Street, Mansfield, who says:

"I want to help spread the good news about Vendol because I'm positive it can help other people as it has me. I suffered from constipation so bad that it isn't surprising I had other troubles due to this condition. Anyone with constipation knows what it means to suffer this way. Well, it often made me feel dizzy, spots danced before my eyes, my tongue was coated, breath unpleasant, my nerves wouldn't allow a good night's rest, and I often had pains across my back and down my limbs.

"I tried different medicines but truly it seemed Vendol was made for my troubles alone, because it relieved my constipation in the most gratifying manner; then all those other things that had made me miserable passed away. Now I'm feeling grand, enjoy restful sleep, get up ready for the day's work, and no longer come home at night tired out as I used to.

"I'll tell you, Vendol is fine medicine and it is my hope that everyone suffering like I did will let it help them, too."

Why not, do what thousands right here at home have done; that is, give Vendol a chance to help you. Come to Central Drug Store, Corner Main and Fourth Streets, and let the Vendol Man tell you all about this great Root, Herb and Alkaline medicine. All druggists sell it.—Adv.

SOCIETY & CLUBS

Informally Speaking...

By MARIANNE

Marianne

NIGHT ROBES have taken on added glory this year, and the downtown stores are showing some of the most attractive ones I've seen in a long, long time. . . . Slipper satin seems to be leading the parade in such shades as dusty rose, French blue, dubonnet, aqua and navy. . . . Some styles have zipper closings while others wrap around. . . . There are long sleeves and short, bustle backs, quilted trim, corded trim and tiny bows to add to the smartness of these gowns.

As for pajamas, "tommies" are the very latest. . . . They're all made in the same man-tailored style—but come in a wide variety of color combinations. . . . Red plaids and blue plaids piped in plain colors are quite gay. . . . Spun rayon in grayed shades of blue and peach are trimmed with contrasting colored piping. . . . And broadcloth numbers have trousers that are a contrast to the blouse but match the trim of it in such combinations as dubonnet and eggshell, navy and powder blue, peach and sky blue.

If you rest best on a sleeping porch where the air is cool, you'll find that those new fitted flannel gowns and pajamas are just the thing. . . . They have slim princess lines with long sleeves, and the flannel is in bright and pastel prints. . . . Closely woven balbriggans will keep you comfy too—in fact, they come in such bright colors that it would seem almost impossible to chill in them.

OF ALL the materials used for milady's gowns, none seem quite so alluring as velvet, so perhaps that's why it's such a style leader this fall. . . . I saw a pretty afternoon frock yesterday which was fashioned of royal blue velvet with a back dip and bustle bow, high front waistline, and shirring and tucks for trim. . . . Black velvet is always good, and when it's relieved with white, it's even more attractive—one of the local shops is showing a black velvet gown made with back fullness, shirred bracelet length sleeves, and a jeweled white lace yoke. . . . Velveteen is smart too—especially when it's a two-piece dubonnet suit combined with a blouse of harmonizing plaid.

Speaking of velvet, the most attractive formal I've seen this season, combines black velvet and taffeta to the very best advantage. . . . The fitted velvet bodice has the new tunic effect, and the full taffeta skirt is attached with perky bows. The top of the bodice is trimmed with a taffeta ruffle and held in place with narrow taffeta straps. . . . And I must say you'd really be the belle of the ball if you appeared in this stunning gown!

GIVE your old dress a new note by changing the present collar to one of glistening sequins—these gay little collars can be had in silver, gold and black—or newer still, in gold or silver trimmed with bright multi-colored sequins. . . . And there are smart belts to match all of them.

Are you troubled with cold fingers or ears in the wintertime? Well, you can solve the first problem with a pair of wool fleece mittens in a variety of bright colors. . . . And the latest thing for warm ears is a set of ear muffs in bright brushed wool, made with a little halo across the top of the head fastening them together.

MOST any dressing table can be enhanced with a musical powder box, and one of the stores is showing some now made of brushed metal in shades of turquoise, lavender, green and silver which play tunes ranging from the popular ballad, "Alone," to old English folk songs.

THAT EXTRA NICETY: Fluffy milk bath (a product of one of the country's leading cosmetologists) will really make your bath luxuriant, because besides the foamy bubbles and helpful qualities of the milk for your skin, it's scented with the popular "blue grass" fragrance—so all in all, it's nice enough to please anyone.

Mansfield Sorosis Holds Dinner Party, Has Papers

DINNER was served in the recreation room of the home of Mrs. Carl Heim, Glendale boulevard, South Boulevards, last night to members of the Mansfield Sorosis. Guests were Mrs. Thomas W. Taylor, Barnesville, and Mrs. William Cover, Cleveland. Mrs. Ferdinand Fox, Cleveland, a charter member, was also present.

Fall decorations of leaves, corn shocks, and gourds were used for the affair which was planned by Mrs. E. D. Gibson.

Miss Bertha Patterson gave the first paper which was entitled, "Discovery and Settlement of Australia." She told that Australia was already discovered, and some of its capes and inlets were named when Columbus discovered America. Capt. Cook's survey led to the real exploitation of the continent, and the English began to settle around 1800. The country was first pastoral, and added mining with the discovery of gold around 1850.

The other paper was "The Underground Railroad" by Miss Ruth Culbertson who said, "The Underground Railroad was a Conspiracy of substantial citizens to defy a law which they thought was wrong." She explained that the geographical location of Ohio made it ideal for stations, and some 20 towns along the Ohio river assisted the fleeing Negros. The first anti-slavery newspaper, and the first anti-slavery society were both established in Mt. Pleasant.

The next meeting will be Oct. 31 with Miss Grace Courtney at the Women's Club.

REVIEWER PRESENTS OPENING PROGRAM

Mrs. W. E. Benninghoff Returns To Mansfield Under Auspices of Women's Association of First Congregational Church.

ONE of the most fittingly titled books of the season—"So Stands the Rock" by Anne Miller Downes—was reviewed yesterday afternoon by Mrs. W. E. Benninghoff, Cleveland, who presented the first in a series of three book reviews at the First Congregational church. Mrs. Benninghoff, who appeared here last year, returns again under the auspices of the Women's Association of the church.

Before a group of women who nearly filled the main floor of the church auditorium, Mrs. Benninghoff told the story of Miss Downes first novel. The book is set in Vermont, and tells of the immovable and unassailable character of Jessie Perkins, the heroine of the story. She is so lacking in emotion that her husband, Angus Shawn, likens her to a rock at whose feet currents wash and break.

The plot is a simple one of a Scotch-Irish lad who married a New England girl, and settles in the Vermont mountains to become a crusading newspaper man, not a farmer. The horror philosophy which preceded the bringing of talk about social diseases into the open is carefully shown in the latter part of the book. It is a novel of conflicting personalities, and moving beauty.

Miss Helen Hurst, president of the association, introduced Mrs. Benninghoff. Altar flowers included yellow and white chrysanthemums, and brass bowls of lavender winter asters.

The next review will be given promptly at 2:15 p. m. Nov. 28.

Mr. and Mrs. Campbell Wed 63 Years Today

Sixty-three years ago today—that was back in 1876—Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Campbell became man and wife in Troy township. Today they quietly celebrated their wedding anniversary at their home on Marion avenue road. Mrs. Campbell, who is 83, spends her days making quilts, and fancywork, while her husband, who is 87, still husks corn and chops their firewood.

They are the parents of Mrs. Ray Williams, Marion avenue road, Mrs. E. T. Whiteleather and Lewis M. Campbell, both of Mansfield. They have seven grandchildren, and seven great-grandchildren. Both Mr. and Mrs. Campbell taught school, he at the Gas and the Quail Track schools near Lexington, and she at Fairview. Mr. Campbell has been a farmer since his marriage.

Mrs. Benninghoff will give "Days of Our Years" by Pierre Van Paassen at that time. Tickets for the review may be purchased at the door before the program.

Rugged Attack Gives Bucks Edge Over Gophers

IN THE RUHL BOOK

By OSCAR RUHL
(News-Journal Sports Editor)

THE average football fan isn't getting his money's worth, and it's his own fault.

It's Coach Ted Bank's well-considered opinion that the average fan misses the big thrills of the game because he forgets that a team has 10 men—besides the one who is delegated to carry the ball.

Maybe the though isn't original with Bank, but of those who share the theory, there are few as emphatic. To prove his point, the University of Idaho coach has even permitted release of a brochure titled: "How to Watch a Football Game."

"Technically, every play is good for a touchdown," Bank relates. "If every man on the team executes his particular task, a touchdown is the result."

It's this business of "execution" that Mr. Fan overlooked.

To Bank, the man who packs the ball is just that—the man who packs the ball.

"If the fan would center his thoughts on the entire team; watch the linemen charge, the backs block, and then watch the ball carrier plow through the openings made, he would get more enjoyment of the game," says this man who learned his football from Fielding Yost and Bernie Bierman.

Defensive play is another important item to a pigskin aesthete, Bank believes. The average ticketholder keeps his eye on the team in possession of the ball. When a brilliant run is broken up, Mr. Fan knows as much of how the offensive was smashed as the man who stayed home to listen in on the radio.

"Watch the entire team on defense and note how they meet the different type of plays," advises Bank. "Each team has a special defense for line plays, end plays, passes and punts.

For instance, on a punt the fan should watch the protection that forms around the safety man as he scoops up the ball. On a pass, the fan should watch the defense gather around eligible pass-receivers with the line eluding offensive blocking and charging the passer. On line plays, keep an eye on the linemen and backs who smash through to smash up some coach's "dream play."

"Perfection is a touchdown," declares Bank. "A missed block is misery for the coach, but it makes the game interesting for the fans.

And, it might be added, it's the fan who makes the game "interesting" for the coach if there are too many of those missed blocks.

No Radical Shakeup Planned by McKechnie.

CINCINNATI — (UP) — Will McKechnie, field boss of the latest world series team sacrifice to the New York Yankees, gave the lie today to gossip of plans to shake up the Cincinnati Reds playing personnel in wholesale fashion for 1940.

"I am willing to go on record right now that the Reds will definitely not be torn down for next season," the deacon asserted as he surveyed the wreckage of Redleg hopes after the Yankee storm.

Honors Pitt's Mentor

United Press Names Charles Bowser of Panthers as Coach of Week.

By HARRY FERGUSON

NEW YORK—(U.P.)—He was on the spot in the battlefields of France during the World war and he was on the spot on football fields when the season opened this year. Both times he came through.

The United Press nominates for the coach of the week—Charles William Bowser of Pittsburgh.

Pittsburgh lost more than a great coach when Dr. Jock Sutherland resigned; it lost the backbone of what was one of the great college teams of the nation last season. Six varsity linemen and three-fourths of the 1938 "dream backfield" were gone when Bowser stepped in and took charge of football at Pittsburgh this season.

But today, to the surprise of almost everybody, he has an unbeaten, untied team and last Saturday he conquered mighty Duke, eastern representative in the Rose Bowl last year, by 14 to 13.

At the start of the season there were storm signals flying at Pitt, warning those who would heed that Bowser was going to have a pretty fair club. He took his boys to the Pacific coast and gave Washington a 27 to 6 licking. Then he trimmed West Virginia, 20 to 0. Football may be de-emphasized at Pittsburgh, but you would have a hard time convincing Washington, West Virginia and Duke of that.

Bowser is a product of the great days of Pop Warner at Pitt. He played on the varsity in 1920-21-22. One of the odd things about him is that he established a reputation as a good football player, although he played every position except fullback and halfback. He shifted from end to quarterback to tackle to center to guard without losing efficiency.

Born at Ligonier, Pa., on Nov. 29, 1898, Bowser went to public schools in Ligonier and Johnstown. In his senior year, he left high school to join the army and was assigned to drive an ambulance. He never had driven an automobile, but in Italy he received training for half an hour and was sent to the front. One of the mysteries to Bowser was how to put his ambulance into reverse gear, but when an officer came up to inspect him, he got by without wrecking the machine.

He entered Pitt after the war, spent one year playing freshman football and three on the varsity, shifting to whatever position needed a strong player.

His coaching career began at Grove City college in Pennsylvania as assistant to Chalky Williamson. He became head coach in 1924. Three years later Bowser went to Pitt as assistant coach, remaining there until 1929. In 1930 he switched to Bowdoin college, Brunswick, Me., where he was head coach for five years.

* * *

He returned to Pitt as assistant coach in 1935 and remained until the spring training season of 1938. Then he resigned and was out of football until chosen to succeed Sutherland.

Richland Club Selects Staff

Frantz, Church and Diller Named Range Officers.

Appointment of range officers and directors were made at a meeting this week of the Richland Gasco Rifle and Pistol club at its indoor quarters in the basement of the Swan Cleaners building.

L. A. Arntz, secretary, announced today that Oscar Frantz, Lee Church and Howard Diller have been appointed range officers. Paul Hartman, pistol director, and C. A. Hassinger, junior small bore director.

Announcement was also made that an application for the entry of the club in the Crawford county league has been filed.

The club will assist with the organization of gun clubs at the Senior high school, Westinghouse plant and Sacred Heart seminary, near Shelby.

Arntz said that rifle matches will be staged on the indoor range Tuesday and Friday nights, with Wednesday night being turned over to pistol shooting.

The annual election of officers will be held late in February, Arntz said.

MONAHAN RELEASED

CHICAGO —(UP)— The Chicago Cardinals of the National Professional football league released end Hal Bradley and guard Regis Monahan today. Monahan is a former Ohio State star.

Rah, Rah, Hold That Line! (Hold Everything!)

It was a bitterly played, thrilling football game that the Frankensteins and the Panthers put on the other day in New York City's Hell Kitchen section. Here's an example of how the Frankensteins' powerful defense stalled the fierce Panthers in the playground contest. Exceptionally fierce was the "blocking," as illustrated by the headgear-wearing youngster at the left. Big Vincent (Butch) Marino (wearing the sweater) was a "standout" at backing up the line. The official score was not announced.

Hallabrin Tells Scribe of Time Tygers 'Almost' Beat Massillon

Ohio State Sophomore Star Believes Loose Yard Line Cost Mansfield Victory In 1937.

By EARL FLORA

COLUMBUS—Joltin' Johnny Hallabrin, Manfield's sophomore gift to Schmidt, knows just how the Yankees are going to feel one of these days if the other American league clubs ever get wise and start another league all of their own.

"I once played with a very fast Mansfield high team in the North Central Ohio conference," quoth Johnny. "In fact, I played with a very fast Mansfield high team in the North Central Ohio conference for two years. The third year I played with a very fast Mansfield high team on an independent schedule. The other teams had simply started a new league. They used the same league name, but somehow Mansfield was behind the eight-ball when the invitations were passed out."

Now, Johnny won't come right out and admit why his school suddenly had to adopt an isolation policy. "As far as I know none of our linemen had unpleasant breath and our jargon wasn't exceptionally foul," hinted John. And that's about all that conservative John will say.

The truth of the matter was that Mansfield high was growing just a teeney-weency bit too tough for its weaker brethren. So a revolution quietly took place and the dictator was exiled.

And Johnny Hallabrin, now up and coming Buck fullback, was about five good reasons why Mansfield was acquiring a monopoly on victories. In his three years of competition at Mansfield, John played all four positions in the backfield. Not at the same time, mind you. Even though he was probably capable of doing so.

Johnny will tell you that he wasn't anything out of the ordinary even though he did gain All-State and All-N. C. O. first team selections. According to John, he "almost" became a hero "once."

It was during a Mansfield-Massillon game in his senior year with the score tied, 6 to 6, in the fading seconds of play. Capt. Joggin' Johnny, clamped onto a desperate Massillon pass on his own 20-yard line and with five second left, set his rudder for the enemy goal line 80 yards away. He was still straight-arming nicely on the 50 and dodging beautifully on the opposing 40.

At last there was nothing between him and victory excepting the safety man and 20-odd yard stripes. Well, John got by the safety man trickily and was reaching around to pat himself on the back when one leg forgot what the other one was doing and piled John up 15 yards from victory just as the gun went off.

John still thinks that he was running too close to the ground and tripped over a loose yard line.

Modest John will tell you that was his closest venture to receiving the keys to the city of Mansfield. But we have our doubts. In the first place because John received no fewer than 16 letters, four each in football, basketball, track and golf.

In the second place, because he's dead certain to see a lot of action at fullback this year with the Bucks even though he's got such men as Langhurst, Rabb and Welbaum with which to contend. Johnny is one of those guys that looks like a gentleman in civies and a ruffian in uniform. He's probably a little bit of both because he'll have a heart-warming smile for you even when he's just blasted through your position, taking various portions of your anatomy with him.

Thus far, John hasn't received as much credit as is actually due him. In fact, he's probably the least heard about sophomore sensation on the squad. But before Rabb had shifted back to fullback and while Langhurst was in dry-dock with a leg infection, Hallabrin received a much-deserved chance.

To say that he ran wild on those two afternoons against the reserves would be putting it mildly. John simply chewed their line to bits, going through for a six-yard average whether there were any holes there or not. He's not overly particular whether there are any holes around. If one isn't there, you can bet that he'll manufacture one.

And when Rabb an Welbaum do a light fantastic up the aisle in quest of their diplomas next spring, Langhurst, Schmidt, and Hallabrin will smile with glee anyway. The first two because the latter will still be around and the latter because it means that he'll be seeing oodles of action in 1940.

Junior Tygers Meet Sylvania, Shelby Teams

Sophomores, Host to Whippets Today, Defeat Marion Eleven, 12 to 0.

One down and two to go . . . that's the job on schedule for the Mansfield sophmore's this week.

The junior Tygers avenged a scoreless tie played earlier this season when the walloped the Marion reserves, 12 to 0, at Stadium field yesterday.

Doolittle

Today Coach Harry Mehock's sophomores were scheduled to tackle the Shelby reserves on the home field.

And the BIG GAME for the sophomores comes up Friday at Stadoum field where they will engage the Sylvania varsity. This game is billed for 3:30 p. m. and there will be no admission charge.

The sophomores presented their best brand of football of the season yesterday when they whipped the Presidents. After three scoreless quarters, the junior Tygers scored twice in the final period.

A pass play from Bill Doolittle to Bob Winbigler that netted 60 yards scored the first touchdown. Jim Templeton tallied the other score on a plunge from the five. Adam Brandt missed both conversions.

Indiana Rated Over Illinois

United Press Expert Figures Notre Dame May Run Away With Middies In Cleveland.

By STEVE SNIDER

CHICAGO—(U.P.)—Shooting the angles on major football games in the midwest Saturday:

Ohio State at Minnesota—Here's one of the top games of the week, involving two exponents of power football. Ohio State is going great with only moderate use of its customary razzle-dazzle, confining the Fancy Dan stuff to scattered laterals and sound forward passing by Don Scott. This rugged attack and Minnesota's doubtful physical condition after the tough Purdue game last week make Ohio State a slight favorite. Minnesota, regarded as the most improved team in the Big Ten since its defeat by Nebraska, likely will play conservative football and wait for a break to score on that Big Red line of the rebounding Bucks. The main Minnesota stress now is on defense.

Wisconsin at Northwestern—Harry Stuhldreher of Wisconsin was optimistic about the Badgers until their defeat by Indiana. Now he has a long, long face as he gets them ready for the Big Ten's enigma — Northwestern. The odds favor Northwestern.

Indiana at Illinois—Bob Zuppke says his Illini are so tired after playing in that California heat last week they haven't the strength to play much football for another week. Then may be too tired to score (they didn't against Bradley or Southern California, either) but they'll make it tough on Indiana's running attack. Harold Hursh's passing gives Indiana the edge.

Michigan at Chicago — Before this one is over Chicago's Maroons will feel like the little man who wasn't there. It will be Michigan by a mile, or as much as the Wolverines choose. To make it safer, Paul Kromer, injured left halfback who led Michigan in scoring last year, will be available. This is a spot for those much discussed Michigan reserves to pile up some playing time.

Michigan State at Purdue—Purdue expects to spring loose Mike Byelene, Lou Brock or Jack Brown on a winning touchdown jaunt in this one. Mike just missed against Notre Dame and ran 45 yards to tie Minnesota. So far, however, this strong Purdue club is without a victory and is overdue.

Notre Dame vs. Navy at Cleveland—The service teams usually draw out the best in Notre Dame. The Irish cut loose only once against Southern Methodist and scored in two plays from their own 40. If Navy scores early, Notre Dame may run away with it. If they don't, the Irish likely will take it easy until a scoring opportunity presents itself and as long as Notre Dame's luck holds out, these tactics work. The Irish definitely are pointing for some game in the near future—probably Carnegie Tech—but if it's Navy, look out!

HITLER DINES CREW OF SUB

German Seamen Honored for Daring Sinking of British Battleship Royal Oak.

est" which a submarine could accomplish.

After Prien related in detail his Scapa Flow experience, Hitler entertained the crew at a private dinner.

Hitler had placed his personal plane "Grenzmark" at the disposal of the crew to bring them from their port to the capital.

The high command's communique said "numerous prisoners were taken" as advancing German troops occupied positions which the French gave up yesterday between the Moselle river and the Palatinate forest.

Seven enemy planes, of which two were British, were shot down over German territory by anti-aircraft fire and pursuit planes, the communique said. Three other British planes were reported downed "in an airfight over British territory."

The communique also acknowledged that one German fighting plane was brought down by anti-aircraft fire during the raid on the British naval base at Scapa Flow yesterday.

The raid, it was added, resulted on a bomb hit on "an older English battleship" (the Iron Duke)

Meanwhile the German press declared that Britain would continue to be the objective of German attacks by plane and submarine.

Rejoicing and pride over the accomplishments of submarines and the air force in inflicting losses upon Germany's "chief enemy" dominated the newspapers.

Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, commenting on the fact that a submarine had gone straight into the "lion's den"—the British naval base at Scapa Flow—declared that the spirit of Otto Weddigen, a World war submarine hero, animated present-day crews of the undersea boats.

"And in this spirit of attack," the newspaper said, "England will be given no rest."

POLITICIAN, 35, ENDS OWN LIFE

3rd Louisiana Public Figure Kills Self In 5 Weeks of Scandal.

NEW ORLEANS, La — (U.P.) — Lawrence Merrigan, 35, former internal revenue collector, today became the third Louisiana politician to kill himself in five weeks of public scandal.

Like the others—Dr. James A. Shaw, official in the state conservation department, and George Heidelberg, head of the National Youth administration at Louisiana State university — Merrigan shot himself.

He had been income tax consultant for Dr. James Monroe Smith, the former L. S. U. president who faces numerous federal and state indictments for swindling.

OPPOSITION TO BIGELOW PENSION PROPOSAL GAINING MOMENTUM

ation, would drive industry from the state, undermine the school finances, increase unemployment, and that the pension plan discriminates against deserving classes of citizens.

At the same time the central committee voted approval of the present plan under which indigent persons over 65 years are paid $23 a month.

The Democratic state committee was summoned by Chairman Earl H. Hanefeld to meet this afternoon and it was expected it also would take a stand against the proposed amendments. E. B. Kallmerten of Mansfield, a member of the state committee, will attend the session.

Everywhere over the state organizations and individuals are campaigning against the proposed amendments. The Ohio American Legion branded them as "un-American and class legislation." The Townsend Plan association, which sponsors a pension plan of its own, is pledged to work against it.

Other groups that are interested in defeating the amendments are school teachers, professional men and women, farmers, real estate men and social service workers.

Arguments Advanced Against Plan

Aside from the most important argument against the Bigelow plan—which is that it will bankrupt the state,—opponents advance a number of other reasons why it constitutes a serious threat to the entire state set-up, as well as being highly discriminatory as to classes. They include:

1—The minute the pension plan becomes an amendment to the state constitution, it sets up a first mortgage lien on every tax dollar in the state. In other words, the pension, being a part of the constitution, will have to be paid before any other state department can be financed.

2—Because of this lien on taxes of the state, it would be a serious threat to the operation of public schools, to insane asylums, orphanages, and all welfare institutions, because the $310,000,000 would have to be paid out regardless of whether anything else was paid or not.

3—The best authorities believe that the state would lose all federal aid on old age pensions—the federal government now pays a half, matching state funds—because the federal old age pension money must specifically go to indigent persons. The Bigelow pension would go to paupers and millionaires alike.

4—The pension is unfair and discriminatory because it excludes all who have not been classified as "wage earners" which takes in farmers, housewives, professional men and women, school teachers, and business owners.

5—The exhorbitant tax on real estate would drive manufacturing concerns and business from the state, resulting in increased unemployment. The real estate tax would hit almost every person owning property in towns and cities. A house and lot valued at $5,000, for instance would be assessed a $100 tax in addition to all other taxes on it.

Although there has been less publicity given to the second proposed change to the constitution, it is no less serious for it strikes at the foundation of the present form of state government, Bigelow opponents claim.

Under the present referendum law, before an amendment to the constitution can be placed on the ballot, petitions must be secured which bear ten per cent of voters' names from at least 50 counties and six per cent of all voters from 50 counties must sign petitions before a proposed law can be placed before voters.

The Bigelow plan proposes to cut these to 100,000 names gathered anywhere in the state to place an amendment on the ballot or 50,000 names to place a proposed law on the ballot.

Opponents charge that this would permit any minority of "crackpots" or those with foreign sympathies to get their subversive legislation on the ballots of the state.

These payments are calculated at Household's new reduced rates of 2% monthly on balances up to $300 and 1½% yearly on balances over $300 to $500. These rates are less than legal maximum, and are the same to everyone—one price to all. Only borrowers sign—no endorsers on any loan. No credit inquiries of friends or relatives.

TRADERS CASH RALLY PROFITS, MARKET COOLS

Hesitation in Buying of War Shares Believed Due to Scandinavian Parley.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—The stock market's new buying offensive was brought to a standstill today as many traders took advantage of the higher prices to cash profits.

Holding gains of fractions to more than a point were Cerro de Pasco, Caterpiller Tractor, Boeing, American Telephone, Johns-Manville, Eastman, Phelps Dodge and Great Northern preferred.

Off a little were Bethlehem, Douglas, Western Union, Kennecott and Glenn Martin. Most bonds extended the gains scored in the previous session.

Reports a peace mediation move might emerge from the conference of Scandinavian powers seemed to cause hesitation in buying of war shares, which had advenced sharply yesterday.

Overnight news items included the report of the Edison Electric institute that power production for the week ended Oct. 14 was the highest on record, with a total of 2,494,630,000 kilowatt hours. The figure was 1.2 per cent better than for the preceding week and 14.3 above a year ago.

The Rocky mountain, central industrial and New England regions showed the largest percentage gains over last year.

Fascinating Love Story of Rich Girl Told In New Serial

When a young, lovely girl with a fortune is jilted for the third time, she begins to wonder if the trouble lies in herself or if there is some evil plot against her.

That is the beginning of the new serial "Legacy of Love" which started yesterday in The News-Journal. The opening scene is a masquerade ball at a Pasadena hotel. The story, written by Kathryn Bemis, catches the reader's interest from the first chapter in which a man in clown's costume assures the girl that he is at her service and then disappears.

Map 5-Point Revision of Neutrality Shipping Clause

SENATE HOPES CHANGES WILL SPEED ACTION

New Dealers Would Allow U. S. Shipping to Enter Certain Foreign Ports.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—Influential administration senators outlined today a five-point modification of drastic restrictions on American shipping contained in the pending neutrality law revision bill.

They hoped that the concessions would satisfy American shipping interests, and their congressional supporters, and speed final action on President Roosevelt's request for repeal of the arms embargo.

Democratic members of the senate foreign relations committee, who participated in drafting the new neutrality measure, were summoned to meet to consider changing the controversial shipping clauses.

As the bill now stands, it would prohibit American vessels from transporting materials of any kind to any of the belligerent countries or their possessions, even though the ports of call may be far removed from combat zones.

As the Democrats gathered to consider changing this ban, some administration supporters outlined to the United Press the following program as a basis for amendments:

1. Certain areas would be designated into which American ships could transport all materials except arms, ammunition and implements of war. This modification would make possible continuation of trade with Australia, New Zealand, and other countries considered only "nominally at war."

Would Halt Trade.

2. In event of destruction of a vessel with loss of life, the president immediately would be required to declare a temporary halt to trade with belligerents in the area of destruction. Whenever the navy or proper authorities considered all danger had ended, trade could be resumed.

3. The United States government would not support a shipper's claim against a foreign government in the event of the destruction of a cargo.

4. The master of a vessel would be required to give U. S. port authorities a sworn statement listing his cargo in detail, giving the name of the consignee and naming any ports at which he expected to stop en route to his destination.

5. The exemptions admittedly would be drawn to meet the circumstances of the present European war, and would have to be re-examined if another war began in another part of the world, or the present war ended.

John Hallabrin of Mansfield is one of nine members of the Ohio State university football team employed by the state government to help defray their college expenses, dispatches from Columbus said today.

The survey on the number of athletes employed in state departments was made after a recent complaint by Coach Bill Edwards of Western Reserve university who said there were not enough jobs in Cleveland to lure football talent to his school.

The employment of Ohio State athletes by the state government is not contrary to rules of the Western conference with which the school is affiliated, it was pointed out. The conference frowns only on outright subsidization.

Hallabrin, a sophomore, is employed in the taxation department on a half-time basis as an office assistant. Other Ohio varsity gridders employed in this department are Steve Andrako, captain of the team, and Frank Clair, an end, the survey showed.

The personnel division said all the boys worked half-time and received half pay, according to the grades of employment.

Records of the highway department showed that Howard Wedebrook, a halfback, is employed as a "laborer-part-time" at $41.70 per month. None of the other players' salaries were revealed. James Strausbaugh, a star varsity back, works in the state auditor's office as assistant examiner.

State Treasurer Don H. Ebright reported that James Langhurst of Willard had worked in the treasurer's office during the summer months but quit the job upon the opening of the football season.

Jerome Grundies, a tackle of Cleveland, resigned his treasurer's office job when the grid season got under way, but injured his back and was re-employed.

Tom Welbaum, a fullback, and William Collier, a freshman, worked as elevator operators in the liquor department. Richard Fisher, a halfback, does odd jobs about one of the state buildings.

In the public works department, Nicholas Roman, a freshman of Canton, is employed as a telephone operator. Three other freshmen gridders, W. J. Rott, Charles King and Lloyd Miller, have minor jobs in the taxation department.

STATE ORDERS 'PANIC BOLTS' AT 7 SCHOOLS

Marshal Allows 60 Days for Compliance With Order for Pupils' Safety.

State Fire Marshal Ray Gill said in Columbus today that the Mansfield board of education this week would be ordered to make repairs within 60 days on fire exits in seven city grade school buildings.

Gill, who described the condition at one school as "serious," said the action had been taken on recommendation of Gayle Owens, deputy marshal, who with Fire Chief Charles J. Seeburger made an inspection of the Mansfield school buildings two weeks ago.

At that time Seeburger charged school authorities with "laxity" in not installing "panic bolts" on fire exit doors as recommended a year ago.

Gill told The News-Journal today that seven of the city's grade schools were without "panic bolts" on fire exit doors and that the inspections had revealed numerous doors in the buildings that could not be opened "with ease" by small children.

The installation of an additional fire exit door had been ordered at Bowman school where he said a "serious" condition existed because children in one of the classrooms had to go through another room to the exit.

Seven Schools Named.

The schools where "panic bolts" were ordered on the exit doors are Newman, Bushnell, Prospect, Carpenter, Brinkerhoff, West Fifth and Bowman.

In addition, Gill said that a new and larger alarm had been ordered installed at Bushnell school. The inspection disclosed that the present gong could not be heard throughout the building.

Owens, he said reported that during a recent fire drill two classes in the auditorium failed to respond to the drill because the small bell could not be heard in that part of the building.

Four schools were reported to have exit and main entrance doors that were sticking and which he said "small children were unable to open." They were Newman, Prospect, Brinkerhoff and West Fifth.

Superintendent W. L. Miller and J. B. Moke, superintendent of buildings, were out of the city and could not be reached today to say whether the bolts had yet been ordered for the buildings.

SCHOOL BANDSMEN OUT TO HELP THEMSELVES GET NEW UNIFORMS

Members of the Mansfield Senior high school band, going on the assumption that the Lord helps those who help themselves, will conduct a tag-day campaign Saturday on downtown streets in an effort to raise funds for new uniforms.

The uniforms which they now wear show the wear and tear of five years. They were worn in public for the first time just five years ago last Saturday and since then have been worn by a new group of students each year.

They were purchased with the help of the Boosters' club which paid a major portion of the cost of uniforms. Students raised the remainder of the fund.

There are about 92 students in the band this year. Mothers of the band students recently organized a club which will help the boys and girls in their fund raising efforts. Officers are Mrs R. F. Steinbrey, president; Mrs Ralph Damlos, vice president; Mrs. Charles Wilcox, secretary; and Mrs F. W. Gillig, treasurer

The first project of the club was staged last Saturday when members sold boutonnieres at the game, and cleared $13 13 Members of the band will be stationed on street corners Saturday with tags for sale for any amount.

50 at Rehearsals as Child Actors Plan Next Play

Rehearsals for the next production of the Children's Theater, "The Little Princess," are under way at the Public library with approximately 50 children taking part in the classes.

Although there are only 30 children in the cast, 20 others are being trained as understudies, so that if any of them are compelled to drop out of the cast at the last minute, the production will not be impaired, Harold McCuen, director, said.

The choice of the cast is made on a competitive basis in which not only the director but the children have a voice, he explained This is fostered by encouraging criticism of the players by the children.

"The Little Princess," the Frances Hodgson Burnett story which provided Shirley Temple with one of her recent picture plays, will be given at Senior high auditorium Saturday morning, Nov 25. It will be the most pretentious of any of the productions of the Children's Theater to date.

The Theater plans to give four productions during the season, one for each of the holidays. Costumes are being designed and made by a committee of mothers.

Map 5-Point Revision of Neutrality Shipping Clause

SENATE HOPES CHANGES WILL SPEED ACTION

New Dealers Would Allow U. S. Shipping to Enter Certain Foreign Ports.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—Influential administration senators outlined today a five-point modification of drastic restrictions on American shipping contained in the pending neutrailty law revision bill.

They hoped that the concessions would satisfy American shipping interests, and their congressional supporters, and speed final action on President Roosevelt's request for repeal of the arms embargo.

Democratic members of the senate foreign relations committee, who participated in drafting the new neutrality measure, were summoned to meet to consider changing the controversial shipping clauses.

As the bill now stands, it would prohibit American vessels from transporting materials of any kind to any of the belligerent countries or their possessions, even though the ports of call may be far removed from combat zones.

As the Democrats gathered to consider changing this ban, some administration supporters outlined to the United Press the following program as a basis for amendments:

1. Certain areas would be designated into which American ships could transport all materials except arms, ammunition and implements of war. This modification would make possible continuation of trade with Australia, New Zealand, and other countries considered only "nominally at war."

Would Halt Trade.

2. In event of destruction of a vessel with loss of life, the president immediately would be required to declase a temporary halt to trade with belligerents in the area of destruction. Whenever the navy or proper authorities considered all danger had ended, trade could be resumed.

3. The United States government would not support a shipper's claim against a foreign government in the event of the destruction of a cargo.

4. The master of a vessel would be required to give U. S. port authorities a sworn statement listing his cargo in detail, giving the name of the consignee and naming any ports at which he expected to stop en route to his destination.

5. The exemptions admittedly would be drawn to meet the circumstances of the present European war, and would have to be re-examined if another war began in another part of the world, or the present war ended.

SHARE IN RELIEF

Richland County, Mansfield, Shelby Get $4,262.

Richland county, Mansfield and Shelby today received a total of $4,262 in state relief to apply on September relief bills amounting to about $10,000.

The state funds are from an allocation of $750,000 to Ohio counties as the maximum monthly allowance under the new relief law.

Mansfield, with bills totaling $4,157, received $1,690. The county got $1,295, and Shelby's share amounted to $277. The three relief areas must make up the difference between their bills and the state allocations.

The county and its two cities had to provide matching funds before they could share in the state money. The matching funds will be added to the state money for payment of the bills.

REVIEWS DRAMA

Faculty Member at Ashland College Plans Lectures.

ASHLAND — Mansfield alumni and friends of Ashland college interested in "brushing up" on the Shakespearean play, "Hamlet," to be presented in Cleveland next week with Maurice Evans in the lead, will attend the two-night review of Hamlet by Mrs. H. E. Andrews of the college English department Thursday and Friday evenings.

The lectures, free to the public, will take place at 8 p. m. in Founders hall on the college campus. While the review will be divided into two parts, one for each evening, those attending may come on only one of the evenings.

Mrs. Andrews is a well known authority on Shakespeare and has appeared frequently before Mansfield clubs and organizations to give lectures and reviews on Shakespearean plays.

'Ward Week' to Mean More Jobs For Mansfielders

More jobs for Mansfielders and more money in Mansfield's people's purses will be the result of the Montgomery-Ward week opening today, Manager Joseph G. Blahnik said.

The week-long observance will feature many products made locally and 65 extra salespeople will be added to the staff for the week.

Mansfield-made goods in the Montgomery-Ward store here include enamelware, sinks and bathtubs from the Humphryes Manufacturing company; bedsprings from the Perfection Bedspring company and tires made by the Mansfield Tire and Rubber company.

Brass plumbing fixtures, manufactured by the Barnes Manufacturing company, will be on sale and electric irons, toasters and other electrical goods, made by the Dominion Electric company.

"Because of recent business improvement," Blahnik said, "we are looking forward to the greatest event in the history of the Mansfield store."

Ward week is held semi-annually in which Montgomery-Ward stores all over the country participate.

REVEALS HALLABRIN ONE OF 9 GRIDDERS ON STATE PAYROLL

John Hallabrin of Mansfield is one of nine members of the Ohio State university football team employed by the state government to help defray their college expenses, dispatches from Columbus said today.

The survey on the number of athletes employed in state departments was made after a recent complaint by Coach Bill Edwards of Western Reserve university who said there were not enough jobs in Cleveland to lure football talent to his school.

The employment of Ohio State athletes by the state government is not contrary to rules of the Western conference with which the school is affiliated, it was pointed out. The conference frowns only on outright subsidization.

Hallabrin, a sophomore, is employed in the taxation department on a half-time basis as an office assistant. Other Ohio varsity gridders employed in this department are Steve Andrako, captain of the team, and Frank Clair, an end, the survey showed.

The personnel division said all the boys worked half-time and received half pay, according to the grades of employment.

Records of the highway department showed that Howard Wedebrook, a halfback, is employed as a "laborer-part-time" at $41.70 per month. None of the other players' salaries were revealed. James Strausbaugh, a star varsity back, works in the state auditor's office as assistant examiner.

State Treasurer Don H. Ebright reported that James Langhurst of Willard had worked in the treasurer's office during the summer months but quit the job upon the opening of the football season.

Jerome Grundies, a tackle of Cleveland, resigned his treasurer's office job when the grid season got under way, but injured his back and was re-employed.

Tom Welbaum, a fullback, and William Collier, a freshman, worked as elevator operators in the liquor department. Richard Fisher, a halfback, does odd jobs about one of the state buildings.

In the public works department, Nicholas Roman, a freshman of Canton, is employed as a telephone operator. Three other freshmen gridders, W. J. Rott, Charles King and Lloyd Miller, have minor jobs in the taxation department.

STATE ORDERS 'PANIC BOLTS' AT 7 SCHOOLS

Marshal Allows 60 Days for Compliance With Order for Pupils' Safety.

State Fire Marshal Ray Gill said in Columbus today that the Mansfield board of education this week would be ordered to make repairs within 60 days on fire exits in seven city grade school buildings.

Gill, who described the condition at one school as "serious," said the action had been taken on recommendation of Gayle Owens, deputy marshal, who with Fire Chief Charles J. Seeburger made an inspection of the Mansfield school buildings two weeks ago.

At that time Seeburger charged school authorities with "laxity" in not installing "panic bolts" on fire exit doors as recommended a year ago.

Gill told The News-Journal today that seven of the city's grade schools were without "panic bolts" on fire exit doors and that the inspections had revealed numerous doors in the buildings that could not be opened "with ease" by small children.

The installation of an additional fire exit door had been ordered at Bowman school where he said a "serious" condition existed because children in one of the classrooms had to go through another room to the exit.

Seven Schools Named.

The schools where "panic bolts" were ordered on the exit doors are Newman, Bushnell, Prospect, Carpenter, Brinkerhoff, West Fifth and Bowman.

In addition, Gill said that a new and larger alarm had been ordered installed at Bushnell school. The inspection disclosed that the present gong could not be heard throughout the building.

Owens, he said reported that during a recent fire drill two classes in the auditorium failed to respond to the drill because the small bell could not be heard in that part of the building.

Four schools were reported to have exit and main entrance doors that were sticking and which he said "small children were unable to open." They were Newman, Prospect, Brinkerhoff and West Fifth.

Superintendent W. L. Miller and J. B. Moke, superintendent of buildings, were out of the city and could not be reached today to say whether the bolts had yet been ordered for the buildings.

SCHOOL BANDSMEN OUT TO HELP THEMSELVES GET NEW UNIFORMS

Members of the Mansfield Senior high school band, going on the assumption that the Lord helps those who help themselves, will conduct a tag-day campaign Saturday on downtown streets in an effort to raise funds for new uniforms.

The uniforms which they now wear show the wear and tear of five years. They were worn in public for the first time just five years ago last Saturday and since then have been worn by a new group of students each year.

They were purchased with the help of the Boosters' club which paid a major portion of the cost of uniforms. Students raised the remainder of the fund.

There are about 92 students in the band this year. Mothers of the band students recently organized a club which will help the boys and girls in their fund raising efforts. Officers are Mrs. R. F. Steinbrey, president; Mrs. Ralph Damlos, vice president; Mrs. Charles Wilcox, secretary; and Mrs. F. W. Gillig, treasurer.

The first project of the club was staged last Saturday when members sold boutonnieres at the game, and cleared $13.13. Members of the band will be stationed on street corners Saturday with tags for sale for any amount.

50 at Rehearsals as Child Actors Plan Next Play

Rehearsals for the next production of the Children's Theater, "The Little Princess," are under way at the Public library with approximately 50 children taking part in the classes.

Although there are only 30 children in the cast, 20 others are being trained as understudies, so that if any of them are compelled to drop out of the cast at the last minute, the production will not be impaired, Harold McCuen, director, said.

The choice of the cast is made on a competitive basis in which not only the director but the children have a voice, he explained. This is fostered by encouraging criticism of the players by the children.

"The Little Princess," the Frances Hodgson Burnett story which provided Shirley Temple with one of her recent picture plays, will be given at Senior high auditorium Saturday morning, Nov. 25. It will be the most pretentious of any of the productions of the Children's Theater to date.

The Theater plans to give four productions during the season, one for each of the holidays. Costumes are being designed and made by a committee of mothers.

Mansfield News-Journal

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 18, 1939.

Don't feel too sure that an addict to any particular sport is over enthusiastic unless you've tried it.

Since "Happy" Chandler has been promoted from Kentucky governorship to the U. S. senate he seems even happier.

Dorothy Dix advises newlywed young couples to establish their own homes—and it might also be mentioned that two and two continue to make four.

Many Supporters of Y. M. C. A.

EVERY progressive city recognizes an obligation to sustain a number of character building organizations designed to perform some specific community service.

In addition to gaining quite general acceptance and recognition as an actual need, each of these gradually develops the enthusiastic support of many persons who are especially impressed with the work it is doing.

Such is the situation with the Mansfield Y. M. C. A., which is now engaged in a campaign to secure 200 new members and renewal of 300 present memberships.

A city of Mansfield's size and position cannot be imagined as "getting along" without a Y. M. C. A., nor is it imaginable that this city lacks a sufficient number of interested and service-minded citizens to provide adequate financial support to such an organization, as well as to have membership therein and participate in its varied health-building, character-developing and mind-training activities.

As is said in a presentation of the purposes of this membership campaign: "The Y. M. C. A. reaches every creed and class. It has stood for many years as a monument of service to the youth of our community and many citizens will recall from their own youth the important part played in their lives by this institution. Such work as is done by the Y. M. C. A. must continue if Mansfield is to properly attend to its civic duties."

Several forms of membership, applicable to various requirements, are available, each of which should be understood and considered by persons not already familiar with the diversified recreational and educational programs of the "Y."

A further broadening of interest in the Y. M. C. A., and encouragement toward increasing its usefulness in Mansfield, will reflect creditably on this city and its people.

Tragedy at Unguarded Crossing

EFFORTS to compel installation of flasher signals at the unprotected B. & O. railroad grade crossing near Springmills is a natural consequence of the distressing tragedy that occurred there early Monday when two Shelby youths were killed and a third injured.

Long, unlighted freight trains passing over an unguarded grade crossing constitute an extra hazard of night driving which should be constantly kept in mind by motorists, with speed adapted to conditions.

Much as the elimination of all grade crossings may be desired, such an accomplishment is admittedly impossible for many years and the alternative of installing flasher signals at crossings on much-traveled highways in all rural sections will also take considerable time.

Meanwhile, as a more immediate safeguarding against repetition of such disasters, it cannot be too strongly stressed that driving speed should be materially reduced on Ohio highways, and that in after-night driving the speed should be no greater than will permit bringing the car to a full stop within the distance that marks the range of headlights.

The crossing at which this accident occurred is on a highway that carries a large percentage of the traffic between Mansfield and Shelby. Action by Shelby council in attempting to secure installation of signal lights is to be commended and should be given co-operation by county officials in gaining early attention from the state utilities commission.

Progress In Grocery Business

SOMETIME, when you are in an inquisitive mood, give a little time to inquiry into the widespread sources of the various foods and other home needs which have been so conveniently brought together at your grocery store.

Consider the intricacies and perfection of a distribution system which makes the products of other countries, as well as distant parts of the United States, so readily accessible to you that even a telephone call results in quick delivery to your very door.

These thoughts come to mind as mention is made that this is National Retail Grocers' week, when special emphasis is being placed on the part that the wholesale and retail grocery business plays in contributing to the convenience and comfort of everyone in this community — and in all communities.

Few advances from the past to the present generation have been marked by greater changes than have been seen in the speedier distribution, wider variety and improved service provided by merchants in the grocery line.

War-Order Realism

ONE of the most reassuring signs of these troublous times is the general disposition of our American business men not to lose their heads at the prospect of war orders and hypothetical war profits. Their attitude is summed up by Raymond Moley in Newsweek, as follows:

"Despite the rantings of some critics of business, the last war taught the American people many things. One is that higher prices do not necessarily mean greater profits to business; that hoarding by consumers always raises prices, and that hoarding is not controllable by manufacturers; that public speculation in commodity and stock markets is not chargeable to industrial leaders, and that prices of many world commodities in manufacturing are actually beyond domestic control, private or governmental. Another is that war isn't the answer to a single one of our domestic problems."

Seldom, he says, has business opinion in this country taken a position so promptly, and with such unanimity, on a public question.

After two years deliberation, a western state's legislature has decided that a pension plan which it enacted is "financially impossible"—but that's probably a minor defect.

It appears that states in which there is an abundance of turkeys are inclined to favor observance of two Thanksgiving days.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK — Broadway is a little dazed at the way people are spending money, but not too dazed to keep the lines moving, and to reach out and take it while it is there to take. Whether it is the war, whether it is harvest time, whether it is simply that more visitors are around, or that people have more money to spend, I don't know. But last night all but one show on Broadway were sold out and there wasn't even standing room.

This was not true of the clubs. I wouldn't have any idea about the cinemas. But the legitimate theaters, where the flesh and blood actors vie with the noisy audiences for attention, they were playing to capacity business. "Hellz a Poppin" is still—after all these months—playing every performance to standing room. Olsen and Johnson are going to revise the carnival despite its popularity as it now stands, simply because they are becoming bored with the same old routine. One answer to this pleasant tide of business may be that most of Broadway's current attractions are on the lighter side. People like entertainment that takes their minds off bombing planes and booming cannon. . . . "Hellz a Poppin," "Pins and Needles," "See My Lawyer," "The Straw Hat Revue," "Yokel Boy," "The Streets of Paris," the "Scandals" — all are on the slapstick side. . . Only "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," which won the Pulitzer prize, is serious drama. With this a straw in the wind, not many producers will go after "Murders of the Rue Morgue," etc., this autumn and winter. It's laugh time in New York — and are those Broadway boxoffice men laughing!

MANHATTAN, named for the Indians, becomes more like the redmen each season, with its indulgence in bright, glary colors. . . . The 59th street trolleys are now a bright canary hue, trimmed with red. . . . Most of the taxicabs are yellow or spotted like deer. . . . Private citizens are going in for bright colored automobiles, mostly sports variety; but these people are actors, and actors will go in for anything. There is a produce company with a large fleet of trucks in the city, and I give you my word that these trucks are orchid. . . . I saw a yellow monkey in a pet shop window on Sixth avenue, and as that seemed odd to me as a purple cow, I observed this animal closely. But he wasn't tricked up. He hadn't been painted. He was simply a yellow monkey.

I HAVE always wondered why Spencer Tracy reminded me of George M. Cohan, and now it is clear. Cohan was Tracy's first stage manager. Tracy appeared as a very young actor in several productions with Cohan, then a star, and he was smart enough to learn a lot from George. Observe him closely the next time you see him. He has a way of mugging, of getting just a little bit tough, that is George M. Cohan all over again.

Tracy was in town the other night—may still be for all I know. . . . But what I had in mind was that Will Hays, the movie czar, was leaning over a table in one of the hotel dancing rooms, talking with friends. Tracy came by, recognized him, and gave him a resounding thwack on the back of his pants. . . . The czar jumped, then grinned. . . . "There goes the best actor I ever saw," he said in an aside to his friends.

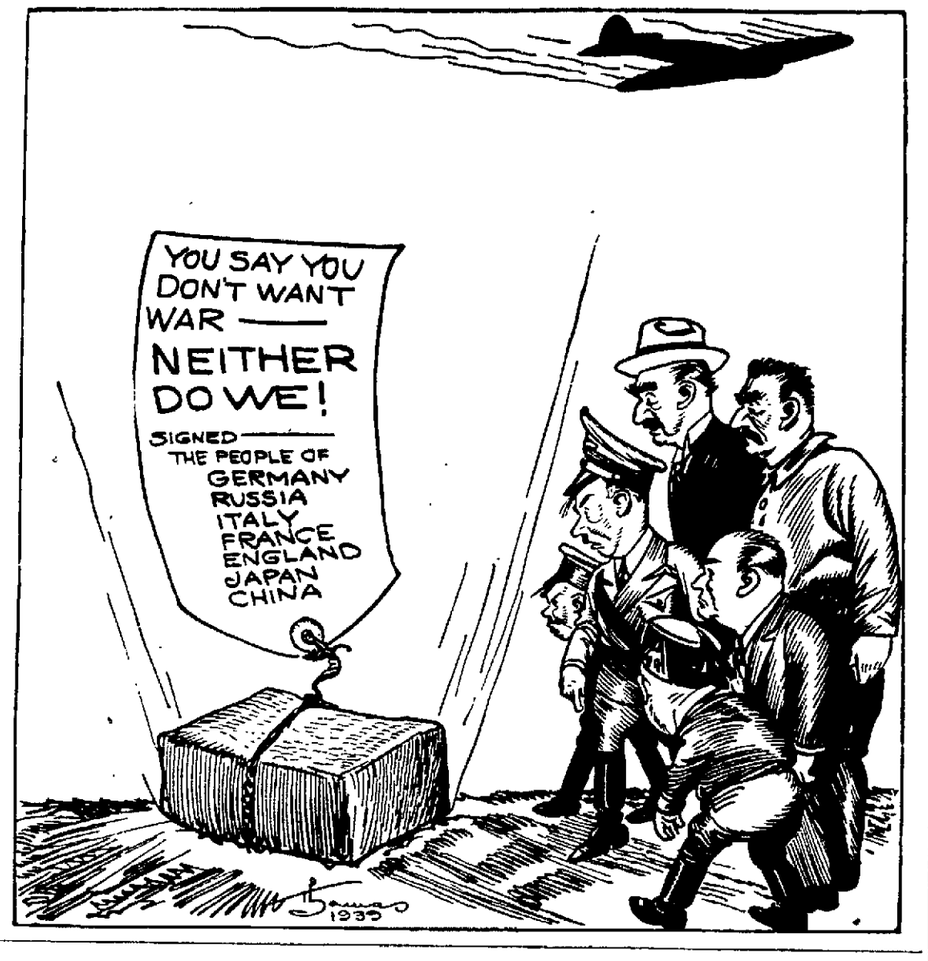
IF THE PEOPLE COULD DROP A MESSAGE



Seeking Quietus on Alien Agitators

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

"THERE is a great unassimilated alien mass in the United States," says Congressman Louis Ludlow, an Indiana Democrat. "Many of these foreign sojourners in our midst," he adds, "represent alien philosophies and are engaged in subversive activities."

So the Hoosier legislator has proposed a law, allowing aliens in this country a year within which each of them must apply for American citizenship or "face deportation."

He's to "face" deportation, mind you. It isn't to be provided that he's to be deported merely because he's been here more than a year without asking for naturalization—not if he's an uninterfering, untroublesome alien, simply in the United States on legitimate business or as a well-behaved visitor.

For all Congressman Ludlow cares he can stay on indefinitely as a foreigner, provided he keeps out of our domestic politics. But if he wants a voice in our governmental affairs, the congressman holds that he ought to become one of us officially and genuinely—or be shipped back where he came from.

Now, Louis Ludlow is no "baiter." He's a very high-type liberal, but he isn't a crank. I've known him for years. He originally was a newspaperman. As an Indianapolis telegraph editor I handled his Washington copy way back in the early 1900's. I've been associated with him as a press galleryite in the capitol. He's no conservative, certainly, but neither is he the type of lawmaker who looks under his bed nightly to make sure that a Communist or a Nazi isn't hiding there. What he says is worth listening to.

Alien Good Manners.

I've been an alien during as much of my career as the average individual.

As an American news correspondent I spent half a dozen years in Europe, with headquarters in London, some of the time while the last war was on and company from overseas had to walk a chalk line or risk being kicked off into the ocean. I spent six or seven years in South America, doing war-day publicity for Uncle Sam and running an English language weekly in Buenos Aires. I've spent a couple or three years in Japan and China.

Consequently, I think I understand how an outsider in a strange land should behave himself in order not to wear out his welcome.

Our Bunds and Things.

Therefore, I incline to sympathize with folk who complain of the activities of foreign set-ups here in the U. S. A.

They're different from such an outfit as our erstwhile Ku Klux. Disapprove however much, you might of the Klan, you had to admit that intrinsically it was American. However, you can't but recognize that Communistic cells, Nazi bunds and Fascist groups are importations, and it's hard not to suspect that they're encouraged from over the water.

I don't quite see what the Dies committee, for instance, is going to do to an American who chooses to affiliate himself with one of these organizations, any more than a Kluxer could be punished simply AS a Kluxer. And I don't see what's to be done as to a German-American of several generations standing if he joins, say, a bund. You can say he's disloyal if his bunch is financed from abroad, but that's about all. A naturalized American of foreign birth doubtless is open to the charge of having been naturalized in bad faith if he hooks up with an anti-democratic aggregation; perhaps his citizenship can be revoked and he can be banished.

But a foreigner who isn't even naturalized?—who's just sent here to make trouble?—he's an obvious nuisance. He's the chap whom Louis Ludlow is on the trail of.

Timely Editorial

Butchering 35,000 Men.

The testimony of Walter G. Krivitsky before the Dies committee in Washington purports to reveal just how Josef Stalin disposes of his "problem" people in Russia.

Mr. Krivitsky, former head of the Soviet Union's military intelligence service — spy system — in Central Europe, said that 35,000 Red army officers were "destroyed" in 1937 and 300,000 to 400,000 exiled.

"Destroyed" means liquidated—killed in cold blood when no resistance was possible, by mandate of a dictator who foresaw, or imagined, that his absolute authority might, in some way, be jeopardized.

The totalitarian governments are huge puppet shows. The people jump and bow and scrape and work slavishly as one man pulls the strings from above. The alternatives are banishment from home—or oblivion.—Toledo Blade.

What About Our Educational System?

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

SOMETHING'S wrong somewhere. Wonder if Dr. Walter Anderson, professor of education at Northwestern university, has the right answer. Here's the trouble:

Approximately twice as many boys as girls fail in the lower grades of our public schools. What's the jinx?

"Women teachers!" says Dr. Anderson, who, we hope and trust, is fully insured against sudden and violent accidents.

Whereupon several million furious femmes will promptly snort—"But why should the sex of the teacher make boys fail?"

"It doesn't!" replies the dauntless Doctor. "Neither the sex of the teacher nor of the student is of great importance in determining educability. But women respect and reward certain qualities in which girls excel—and for which boys have comparatively little regard. Women put a premium on conformity and docility—which are essentially feminine rather than masculine virtues."

"The small child," he added, "doesn't have much opportunity in the modern world to meet men. Their fathers are away at the office all day, and the children go to bed before the men have been home very long in the evening. Since the home can't furnish a male influence, the schools should. There is no real basis for the idea men can't teach small children successfully."

So now it's OUR turn. Do you agree that women put a premium on docility and conformity? I suspect they do. And I'll go the whole way with the doctor when he claims that Junior still regards such virtues as "sissy"—and with cause. But I don't believe that Teacher's to blame for pinning the blue ribbon on these qualities. And I do think it's time for some honest citizen to arise and take the poor gal off a spot which she has long resented.

Teachers are the best thing I know. I've a teacher in my own family — several of them — grand ones, too. I've been tied up with this educational game considerably myself. And, come what may, I'm here to say that when it comes to selecting commendable qualities, Teacher has about as much Self-Determination as a dish of spaghetti . . .

SHE PICKS AND PRAISES WHAT MOM AND THE OTHER TAXPAYERS TELL HER TO . . . OR ELSE!

Moreover, this tyranny extends to Teacher's private as well as her professional life. She is subjected to every personal peeve and prejudice of the local citizenry. Fortunately said citizens are becoming increasingly tolerant and friendly—but a rap at Alcatraz is still an Elk's picnic compared to the program enforced upon some unfortunate school ma'ams. So if they try to make a Perfect Little Lady out of Junior, it is only fair to lay blame where blame is due—on Mom and Aunt Em.

And while I'm ruining an erstwhile brilliant career, I might as well do a good job and applaud Dr. Anderson's protest against our educational emphasis on "conformity and docility." It's my hearty belief that if these qualities didn't go out with the whatnots and pantalettes, they should've. Not only do they wreck husky young males but they make hypocrites and meanies out of promising young females. Any American maid who goes around pretending to be docile in these rambunctious days is either developing rickets or pulling a racket. And fooling nobody. So why not get regular all around?

Ohio Anecdotes

Rural Delivery.

Activities of postal authorities in the wilderness Ohio country went beyond simply distributing the mail, according to an anecdote occurring in the 1790's.

When Jonathan Adler was released from Indian captivity after Wayne's treaty of 1795 he could not remember where his parents lived, having been with the Indians since childhood.

John Moore, a friend, questioned him and learned Adler recalled the name of the town of Greenbriar and that a family of Gullion lived nearby. Moore placed advertisements in the vicinity but at first there was no result.

Months later, however, at Franklinton, Adler was informed there was a letter for him at the postoffice. Paul Adler, Jonathan's brother, had written, stating their mother was alive and residing in Virginia.

WASHINGTON Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—One of the most significant events at the army's spectacular ordnance exhibition at the Aberdeen (Md.) Proving Grounds didn't get reported at all. This was a secret round-table session on "Industrial Preparedness" conducted by Brigadier General C. T. Harris, salty assistant chief of ordnance, and attended by 450 select business leaders.

After giving a general outline of the army's plans for industrial mobilization, General Harris observed, "You gentlemen probably will not like some of the compulsions that would be imposed on you. But, as I am sure I need not remind you, war enforces distasteful compulsions on everybody involved. Which gives point to the moral, 'Don't get into war if you can help it'."

Another moral Harris pointedly tossed at his business listeners was to go easy on price boosting.

"Don't run wild on prices," he warned quietly. "You can't afford to get out of hand on that. The public would resent it and you'll run head-on into trouble. We want you to make money; we are not against that. We're all for it. But there is a difference between making a legitimate and reasonable profit and profiteering."

This thrust brought a chorus of questions as to what was considered a legitimate and reasonable profit.

"Well, I can't talk for the government," said Harris with a twinkle in his eye, "but personally I look at it this way: I had some securities a few years back that paid me six per cent dividend. Now I considered that a very good return on my money—and I think the same now.

None in the audience openly challenged this contention but from sotto voce remarks it was apparent that more than one business man vigorously disagreed with Harris.

Note: The veteran officer scored a big hit personally with the business men by his deft, efficient handling of the meeting. He met an hour's barrage of questions with unfailing tact and good humor; courteously brushing aside silly ones and adroitly side-stepping inquiries he didn't want to answer.

Outgoing Stuff.

NOT all isolationist mail in Washington is incoming. A heavy flood also is outgoing.

The National Council for the Prevention of War, headed by aggressive Frederick J. Libby and housed in the old Ulysses S. Grant building directly opposite the state department, is daily sending out thousands of copies of a speech by Senator Borah and the first radio address of Colonel Lindbergh. And it isn't costing the NCPW a cent for postage.

The heavy six-by-eight manila envelopes are going out free of charge under the congressional franks of Borah and Senator Charles Tobey of New Hampshire.

The other day there were 27 large mailbags filled with these speeches stacked in one of the NCPW corridors. Who is putting up the money for the printing of the speeches (done at cost in the Government Printing Office) and addressing of the envelopes is Libby's secret. Two months ago, before the special session was convened, he gave up some of his office space and cut his staff to six. Today, over 20 clerks are working for him.

New Candidate.

YOU haven't heard anything about it yet, but there is a new candidate in the field for the 1940 GOP presidential nomination.

He is Senator Gerald Prentice Nye, boyish-looking North Dakotan. Townsendite and the most vocal of the isolationist leaders. He has made an average of $15,000 a year the last few years lecturing on the munitions industry and isolationism.

Generalissimos of Nye's campaign are his new secretary, Gerald W. Movius, former Bismarck, N. D., political reporter now on the government payroll at $3,900 a year, and a mysterious John W. Smith, P. O. Box 262, Lexington, Ky. Smith's name is signed to letters and literature seeking to line up Nye delegates to the Republican convention.

A recent letter bearing Smith's name read, "I sincerely hope and pray that you will uphold the noble hands of Senator Nye in his wonderful neutrality work and that you will go to the Republican convention pledged to vote for Senator Nye for the presidential nomination." Also enclosed in the letter were mimeographed press handouts lauding Nye's senatorial record and attacking the WPA.

Nye's so-far under-wraps presidential boom will be no surprise to his friends. He has long harbored secret White House ambitions. After his re-election last year he told an intimate, "Well, I am in the clear now and I can concentrate on going after the presidency. It ought to be a push-over for a Republican in 1940."

Turned Tables.

FOR two years, beginning with the 1937 Supreme Court battle, the GOP delightedly sunned themselves in the glow of the hot factional warring among the Democrats. But now the tables are turned.

Harmonious for the moment, the Democrats are revelling in the rare pleasure of watching the Republicans scrap heatedly among themselves over the neutrality issue.

Still kept undercover, thanks chiefly to the firm hand of brainy Senate Floor Leader Charley McNary, this rowing has resulted in several acrimonious personal clashes between top-rung party chiefs. The bitterest was between Senator Arthur Vandenberg and Colonel Frank Knox.

Old friends, dating back to when they both were cub reporters on a Grand Rapids' Mich., paper, they are on opposite sides on lifting the embargo. Knox stands with the president on the question; Vandenberg is opposed. But this difference was not the cause of their set-to.

What touched them off was Knox's objections to Vandenberg taking a leading role in the isolationists' fight. Knox contended that by sticking himself out in front, Vanderberg was hurting the Republican party. With the party split on this issue, Knox argued that the wise course for the leaders to take was not to become too identified with either side.

Vandenberg resented this counsel and the two men had it out hot and heavy, separating finally in a rage at each other. Since then Knox has debated Ex-Governor Phil LaFollette in favor of the administration's neutrality bill.

Cows on a Spree

(A FARMER'S DIARY)

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

THE little orchard corners into the pasture lot where all summer three matronly Jersey cows have grazed contentedly. The pasture grass is short and seered and dry now, and the slopes are brown. But the tall old orchard trees are laden with ripe red and yellow apples and every high wind blows down a new crop of stubble-pierced worm-eaten fruit which lays upon the ground unheeded by the owner.

A few apples rolled beneath the fence which is propped in places from the orchard side, and the cows got a taste of forbidden fruit. Soon afterward the boldest broke over the wires and with a flirt of the tail and a kick up of the heels defied all the conventions and began to munch and crunch and drool long syrupy threads of sweet cider. When the farm boy and his dog came to get the cows at milking time, all three had gone berserk and were racing from one tree to another, their faces smeared with pomace, leaving bits of half eaten apple in their wake. The barking dog could not impress them either by friendliness or ferocity. He tried both, and then returned, nonplussed, to his master for further orders.

I saw the difficulty and went to help what I could. Together the boy and I succeeded in starting the three cows toward their home barn, but they paused atop a hillock to the east and looked back, bellowing, with ears erect and tails lifted straight up like impudent flags of defiance.

"The old girls act a little tipsy," said the lad.

"They do look a bit ridiculous," I agreed. "Do they often get such spells?"

"Maybe once a year, at apple time," said the boy. "Dad'll keep them up in the barnyard tomorrow, and give them salt and some of the new ensilage, as a sort of pacifier. They'll get over it, but it'll play hob with the milk flow for a time or two."

THEATERS

WHEN Hildy Johnson hit the stage and then the screen, in "Front Page" he was the most dynamic, memorable newspaper character in the annals of the theater. Now that the story—probably the best newspaper play ever to land on the stage—is being re-made at the Columbia studio, Hildy has become feminine, but not sissy. The character has been made into a newspaper gal by the name of Hilla Johnson, but known to her colleagues as Hildy. And she is just as dynamic as the original character—without the profanity and earthy terms—because she is being played by Rosalind Russell. In the first screen version—also a talkie—Hildy was played by Pat O'Brien. He had played the managing editor in the stage play.

BRITISH SCOFF AT GERMANY'S RAID CLAIMS

Chamberlain Asserts Nazis Are Losing in Air Warfare, Says Foes Lost Fourth of Planes.

cruiser Repulse also had been torpedoed in the Scapa Flow raid, and has hinted that the battleship Hood and aircraft carrier Ark Royal also have been attacked successfully.)

Chamberlain specifically denied any damage had been inflicted on the warships Hood, Repulse or Ark Royal.

His statement was made soon after Adolf Hitler in Berlin had bestowed special honors on the submarine commander who torpedoed the Royal Oak and claimed to have damaged the Repulse.

"There have been many surprises in war and they cannot all be pleasant," Chamberlain said, "but we have at least the satisfaction of knowing that we have made a good beginning."

He claimed that despite German propaganda efforts the Allies held a preponderance of sympathy in neutral countries.

Britain intends, he said, to do her best "to mitigate" the inconveniences "which war inevitably brings for all non-belligerent countries."

British military experts rated the submarine torpedo a more deadly weapon than Germany's air force.

The loss of at least eight German planes in raids on two British naval bases in the last two days was declared to be out of all proportion to the small amount of damage communiques said was inflicted on British warships.

The London Times called the sinking of the Royal Oak at anchorage "a disturbing incident, providing grave matter for investigation of the naval court of inquiry which is no sitting."

The Daily Express bluntly told its 2,500,000 subscribers, "the Scapa Flow affair is a disgrace. This disaster is inexcusable."

Official communiques declared the German bombers in a series of raids yesterday failed to do any important damage to the Scapa Flow base in the Orkney islands.

Germans Lose 5,000 Men, French Claim.

PARIS—(AP)—Sharp fighting accompanying a German offensive along the northern part of the western front since Monday already has cost the Nazis more than 5,000 casualties, French sources estimated today.

The French said their own losses were slight as their troops fell back to previously prepared positions and met the advancing Germans with heavy blasts of artillery fire.

Raiding parties from both sides fought a series of localized engagements during the night, the general staff reported in its morning communique. These actions were described as "ambushes and trench raids.

The general staff also noted "intense movement" of troops and materials by both highway and railway behind the German lines.

Military commentators said the greatest activity during the night centered on a small wooded area southeast of Saarbruecken which the Germans tried to capture.

French machine-gunners forced the attackers to withdraw. They said, without ceding the positions.

The fighting has been centered in the region just across the Moselle river from Luxembourg, and in the sector between Saarbruecken and Pirmasens further east.

French reports said their troops had voluntarily abandoned positions on German soil near the Borg forest and Perl, leaving only advance lookouts on Schneeberg Heights close to the border.

When the German advance reached that point, they said, these lookouts reported back to artillery units, which already had calculated the range and cut loose at once with their guns.

Nazis Claim New Gains on West Front.

BERLIN—(INS)—A further French retreat on the western front was claimed today by the German high command, which added that "numerous" French prisoners had been taken.

An official war communique stated:

"Between the Moselle river and Pfaelzerwald, the French evacuated further positions in German territory along the border, which our advancing troops occupied, taking numerous prisoners."

The short communique regarding activity on the western front was preceded by a general headquarters announcement regarding the German aerial attacks on the British naval base at Scapa Flow. It said:

"Air force detachments successfully attacked units of the British battle fleet at Scapa Flow.

"Among others, one battleship was hit by heavy and medium calibre bombs. One enemy fighter was shot down in the ensuing air duel.

"Despite the heaviest anti-aircraft fire, all our planes except one safely reached their home bases."

Most of Cargo Scattered In Truck Wreck Near Ashland Picked Up Intact.

yesterday afternoon and loaded onto a truck and taken back to W. A. Givens, Akron, owner of the wrecked truck and cargo. Deputies from the sheriff's office stood guard over the scattered cargo from early morning until 3 p. m.

An insurance claims adjuster who visited the scene yesterday said most of the cargo was salvaged.

The accident occurred about 5:30 a. m. yesterday. Akers, who had regained consciousness today, was still in too critical a condition to remember anything about it, hospital attendants said.

Deputies believe the driver may have fallen asleep and that the truck was out of control when it rammed the bridge abutment, shearing the body off the chassis, which was left hanging over the end of the bridge, while the truck body was thrown over the bridge, landing at the edge of the creek below.

'IRON CAVALRY' TO LEAD DRIVE

Tiny British Tanks, Capable of 50-Mile-an-Hour Speed, Ready for Attack.

ride in a tank at full speed across broken country, over ditches and through brush, across roads and furrows.

I squinted through the telescopic sight, padded against the jolts, and saw the gun range in the glass that may frame grim sights before the tank's course it run.

We suddenly came upon a ditch about four feet deep. The four and one-quarter tons of steel, machinery, guns, men and ammunition groaned, heaved and was across. My back ached.

I looked at the driver, who grinned and bellowed, "you ought to feel her hit a wall."

Built to stop rifle and machine-gun fire, the tank looks staunch and secure from the outside. Inside, with the iron six inches from your face, you can't help wondering what it would be like if an anti-tank gun scored a hit or if she caught fire and the inside became hell of flames and exploding ammunition.

I recalled what Lord Gort, the British commander-in-chief, told the American correspondents at luncheon yesterday:

"Man is still master of the machine and the best men will win the war."

TURKEY READY TO BACK ALLIES

Rejects Russian Proposals, Prepares to Sign Pacts With Britain, France.

London were advised officially today that Russia presented the following demands:

1—That a Russian-Turkish pact acknowledge that the Balkans constituted a region of Russian influence.

2—That Turkey close the Dardanelles strait at once to warships of non-Black sea powers.

3—That the Russo-Turkish pact make it clear that the proposed Russian-Turkish mutual assistance pact was not directed against Bulgaria.

4—That the pact should not obligate Russia to consult Turkey in event of any German action in the Balkans.

Turkish diplomatic sources said that new Russian demands were presented to Sukru Saracoglu, Turkish foreign minister, after virtual agreement had been reached on the text of a Soviet-Turkish alliance treaty.

Turkish pessimism over the failure of the negotiations was somewhat relieved by a belief that Russia might reconsider its demands and modify them to an extent where resumption of negotiations would be possible.

Less hopeful diplomats forecast that Russia might act to obtain a diplomatic foothold in the Balkans as the result of the failure of negotiations.

CHAPTER II.

Somehow, Rita never could go to Wilmot Green with any of her problems. His piercing black eyes filled her with loathing, his voice like hard chipped ice, frightened her. In fact, she had never known any of her mother's husbands well, and had secretly hated them because they insisted she be packed off to boarding school and kept there.

But now she was finished with school, and Wilmot had been obliged to have her around for quite some time. It wasn't so bad when Delores was home, but being alone in the house with Wilmot and the servants got on Rita's nerves.

Preston Meeker was only politely conscious of Rita during the remainder of that night, but Rita was gay, recklessly gay. Many an eyebrow lifted over the way she was carrying on with her steady stream of partners. Poor Rita! What else could you expect from a daughter of Delores? Will Preston Meeker ever be able to hold her?

But inwardly, Rita was a blazing fire of shame. She knew she was feverishly irresponsible in her dilemma. She wondered if it would be wiser to blazon the truth to the world, say she'd been expertly jilted. But even this crowd of old friends would show her no mercy. Some of them would even be glad. No, she couldn't tell them.

For the sake of appearances, she left the party with Preston. At the door of her home she dropped the engagement ring into his hand with a careless "Better luck next time," and left him standing there slightly nonplussed at her apparent indifference.

But never had she been so filled with self-abasement. Whatever was to become of her- What was this ghost that foiled every matrimonial plan she made? How was she to combat it?

Rita sat up in bed the following morning, wearily pushed honey-colored curls from her aching eyes. She stared stupidly at the lazy ribbon of golden sunshine coming through the open dormer windows, laying itself tenderly on the French gray walls of the large room, on the dubonnet satin hangings; giving high sparkle to crystal bottles and jars on the dubonnet satin, lace-skirted dressing table.

But Rita's tired brain registered none of this. It was desperately searching for a way to adujust her latest misfortunes. Rita Rhodes had jilted another man in her mad, superficial search for pleasure! Rita, who tired of a suitor as soon as she ensnared him! Oh, she knew how everyone would twist this latest morsel of gossip.

And—there was her stepfather to be reckoned with.

That was something.

She met Wilmot Green that night at dinner. They dined alone in the big somber mahogany-paneled dining-room which nothing but her mother's fluffy chatter had ever seemed able to enliven. If only Delores were here now, this bad hour would be so much easier.

As soon as Hobbs, the butler, had served the soup and left the room, Rita said flippantly, "When I think of turtles' supreme sacrifice, I can't go this."

She pushed the soup plate, aside and braced herself against Wilmot's expected caustic comment. He flashed her a stern dark glance over the pink chrysanthemum centerpiece. He was handsome in his tan riding clothes. He had just come in from a long canter, hadn't bothered to change. It was rather an insulting gesture. Rita thought. If her mother were present, he would be looking quite different.

The short-clipped black mustache over his thin red lips moved almost imperceptibly with the raising of his heavy dark brows. "You need nourishment after an all night party. I should say," he remarked, his voice edgy.

Rita's knuckles showed white against the lace cloth. He was leading right up to what she had to say. There was no avoiding any of it now.

"Perhaps," she conceded grudgingly. "But—what a party! A total failure so far as I was concerned!"

He dipped his soup spoon slowly, his long fingers emphasizing his meticulously tended nails. He asked, "Was the party wilder than usual—or didn't Preston come up to your expectations?"

Her lashes curled down over her ashamed eyes. She unlocked her fingers, nervously began tracing a finger around the lace pattern of the cloth.

"That's it, Wilmot. I've something to tell you. Preston wanted—that is, he thought—anyway, everything is finished between us. He just as much as told me he didn't care to marry me."

"What nonsense! And I presume you didn't protest—try to patch it up. You simply broke off the engagement to go on to your next—victim. I don't know what gets into you, Rita."

"When a man shows no interest in—in continuing, I'm certainly not going to throw myself at his head!" she told him heatedly.

"It's disgraceful! Three engagements of yours have been announced—three times they've been broken! What kind of reputation will you have? You know how the newspapers will play it up! And your mother—well, all I can say, Rita,—your mother will be deeply humiliated—and disappointed in you."

Tears welled in Rita's rebellious eyes, her lower lip quivered. Then all at once the whole injustice of this situation struck her full force. She burst out angrily, "But I can't help it! You know very well, Wilmot, I can't! Men are wild to marry me—then suddenly, for no reason, want to foget it. It can't be my fault—yet sometimes I wonder. . . ."

"Fact of the matter is, Rita—you show no particular qualities a man admires in a woman. I presume it will always be so. You should try to be less frivolous. A man likes to marry something more than—froth."

Rita flung him a quick appraising glance. She wondered if by any chance he was thinking of her mother, regretted having married her. Certainly, Delores was frivolous enough—paid him the least possible attention, specially lately.

"I may look and act as if I never had a serious thought in my head—but you should know, Wilmot, I'm not like that, really. But from now on, I'm finished with men! I don't care what any of them think of me! I shall never marry! Let the gossips squawk, let them rave—and see if I care! From now on, I'll be myself!"

"Rita! Think what you are saying! Are you planning to disgrace the family!"

"Yes, exactly. I'd love it!" she cried, jumping from her chair. She flung herself angrily across the room, pausing in the doorway only long enough to cry ont hysterically, "Thank you for your kind sympathy—just what I might have expected!"

In her upstairs living-room she slumped into a big wing chair, and burst into bitter sobs. She hated Wilmot—the despicable, accusing sneak! She hated him with all her heart and soul!

After a few minutes, she calmed down, remembered that tonight she had promised to go to a screen premiere with Jilly Stern and Bob Dilling, escorted of course by Preston. Now, thank heaven, she would have an excellent excuse to remain at home! She could truthfully say that Preston had left town. When she thought about it, what a grand relief it was! No more Preston!

Then why was she acting like a broken-hearted child? She was a rank coward. She was afraid of what people would say, afraid of the ridicule of the newspapers. And that wasn't being a good sport.

A knock sounded on the door. She hastily dried her eyes and called, "Come."

Wilmot stood tall and menacing on the threshold.

"I merely wanted to tell you about the new chauffeur. Abner gave notice yesterday and left immediately. Something about a sick sister. After ten years in your mother's employ, he showed little gratitude, I must say. He recommended a young fellow for the place and I took him on. He'll probably do well enough—his references were excellent. Abner was getting too old, anyway. The new man's name is Stanton."

"Thank you for telling me—but I won't need him often. I'm going in for a lot of reading—perhaps I'll take up my painting again. I'm tired of going around in circles."

"Splendid! Now you're showing some sense! If you follow a course like that, you'll be far happier—and you won't be exceeding your allowance so often."

"But I don't have nearly as much allowance as the other girls in my crowd! It seems inconsistent—when at 25, or when I marry, I'll come into a bigger income than any of them ever expect to have. I can hardly make ends meet on the small checks you give me, Wilmot."

"Why not try a few of the simple pleasures then? Money isn't everything. It's not good for a girl of your age to have too much of it."

It was on the tip of her tongue to ask why he had married a woman with so much money if he didn't value it highly. But there was no use making this man dislike her any more than he already did; and his every move indicated that he disliked her, for some unaccountable reason, as much as she did him.

Wilmot turned away. "You'd better cable your mother about you and Preston—or better still, write her. I haven't the heart to tell her—after the interest she's taken in buying your trousseau in Paris."

"Oh, I'll cable! I'll tell her I don't need a trousseau! And furthermore, if I ever should, I'll buy it myself! I'm tired of being treated like a child! I'm tired and sick of—of everything!" Rita fumed, tears rolling down her cheeks.

As Wilmot disappeared the telephone on the little table beside the infuriated Rita began ringing. Impatiently she snatched the white ivory receiver from its cradle.

"Hello," she said thickly.

"Hello, yourself! Remember me? Rustling bushes beneath romantic lanterns—clown appearing, scent of orange blossoms. Say — what do orange blossoms remind you of?"

She clutched the telephone stand with a shaking hand. Who and what was this persistent man? Why did the mere sound of his voice fill her with heady excitement? What sort of game was he playing? Should she be afraid of him?

Rita laughed a little harshly. She burst out, "So—it's you—the clown!"

"Right," he confessed readily enough. "Isn't it a coincidence? You take up your receiver—and here I am on the other end of the line flinging out advice. Do stop crying. Your pretty eyes will swell—and your nose—that cute little nose..."

"Why, you—you..."

"Tush! Not so loud! Yes, I looked through your window in passing. If you must cry, why not drop the blinds?"

"You've snooped again! You've no right! I'll have it stopped! I'll send the butler out to look for you—with a — a gun!"

His laugh was gay insolence.

"Am I scared!" was his maddening retort.

She slammed down the receiver, her heart pounding ridiculously. Why should that voice do such unaccountable things to her? Why should she hesitate to have the man caught, locked up? He was a regular Peeping Tom, a regular . . .

The telephone broke into this dynamic chain of thought. It rang too insistently to be ignored.

She answered it again only to hear once more the magnetic voice of the clown. This was too much. She would put the man in his place.

"Hasn't it occurred to you that we've never been properly introduced? The way you persist in annoying me. . . ."

"Come now, my proud beauty—I'm no Simon Legree. Can you suggest how a man outside your social circle could maneuver an introduction? Have a heart, darling."

Her laugh came out spontaneously.

"You make it sound—so convincing. I'm afraid you're a dangerous man."

But she was thinking, "A man outside my own stuffy circle might be regular—not an egotistical stuffed shirt."

"I am dangerous, Miss Rhodes—and how!"

The hint of acventure in this intrigued her. Anyway, it was different from anything that had ever happened to her before.

"Well then—that being the case. . . ."

"You're going out with me tomorrow night," he blandly informed her. "I'll call for you—shall we make it eight o'clock?"

"You're preposterous! I have other engagements for tomorrow night—three of them, in fact." She suddenly sounded like the society girl exploited in the rotogravures. "I'll thank you not to bother me again!"

She replaced the receiver quickly, but with a certain reluctance. Then she tried to make herself behave. Of course, she couldn't take a chance with a stranger—he might be out to kidnap her. She wondered, with a little quickening of the pulses, if it wouldn't be a thrilling experience to be kidnaped by so aggressive a man. He appeared to have more courage than the men who couldn't marry her for some vague reason or other. Was it entirely because she could not love them? Love? Fiddlesticks! She was through with love.

By morning, she was still unable, to throw off the feeling of having missed something she shouldn't, but later on this was shocked from her mind by a threatening family upheaval. Wilmot had received a letter from a Paris attorney informing him that Delores was divorcing him. Wilmot was distracted, and Rita was inclined to feel sorry for him. After all, Delores was his wife, even if not a devoted one, and he now was acting as if he could never give her up.

We're restless in the gasoline business. We believe there's no dead-end street on the road to Progress. We've never found a place where we could stop and say "This is it—we can do no better." SOHIO Ethyl was the most popular premium brand in the state, yet we discontinued it the moment we developed SOHIO SUPREME . . . a superior fuel which still has the advantages of Ethyl fluid. We discontinued SOHIO Ethyl and replaced it with SOHIO SUPREME because we believe the better we make our products, the more you will feel like buying them. And you certainly are buying SOHIO SUPREME!

SOHIO SUPREME . . . the great successor to SOHIO Ethyl

Because SOHIO SUPREME so greatly exceeds the minimum specifications for an "Ethyl" gasoline, we have discontinued the sale of SOHIO Ethyl.

We have kept the advantages of Ethyl fluid, and developed in SOHIO SUPREME a motor fuel that is higher in anti-knock, with a better balance of acceleration and power, than any gasoline we have ever before produced for automobile engines. Regardless of the car you drive, we believe the superior qualities of this modern gasoline will be evident with your very first tankful—which you can get today at no increase over the usual price for premium fuels.
